Bill Seeks 'Home Rule' For Prince Georges Area

Sothoron Introduces Measure to Bring Greater Degree of Local Government

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Feb. 7.—A bill to give Prince Georges County a streamlined, "home-rule" type government was introduced in the Maryland Legislature today amid indications it will have clear sailing.

State Senator Harold L. Sothoron, a key administration figure, who sponsored the measure, predicted it would be passed by both houses.

Under the measure, the power to make purely local laws or "ordinances" would be delegated by the State Legislature to the county commissioners. All local laws now applying to the county automatically would be wiped off the books.

Reserved to the State Legislature would be the power to sanction bond issues and such supervisory measures as the Legislature may deem necessary under its constitutional power.

Parent to Watchdog

In effect, the role of the Legislature in purely local county matters would be changed from that of parent to watchdog.

Eleven broad powers under which the commissioners could act are defined in the measure. The commissioners would have to adopt ordinances to draw on these powers.

The measure also would spell out the county's budgetary powers, which are now largely implied.

One effect of the Sothoron bill would be to empower one of five county commissioners to conduct the administrative business of the county.

Differing in many respects from the Montgomery County charter which went into effect over a year ago, the Sothoron bill would become effective after signature by the Governor. The Montgomery County charter plan which provides a county council and a county manager required a referendum of voters to go into effect.

In introducing the bill, Sothoron said "an acute emergency exists with respect to the administrative machinery of government in Prince Georges County" because of the "enormous recent increase in population" in the county and "its resultant burden on all public services and facilities."

Sothoron said he is asking the bill's passage on an emergency basis, but that he also was prepared to press for its enactment on grounds of general public welfare. This session of the Legislature, the first of the biennial 30-day sessions, must confine itself to fiscal matters, emergencies and

Another Search Plane Missing In Yukon Wilds

Whitehorse, Y. T., Feb. 7 (U.P.).—A U. S. Air Force C-47 participating in the search for a missing C-54 transport plane was overdue here tonight and four search planes were sent to look for it.

Air Commodore Martin Costello, search coordinator, said 12 men were aboard the C-47. There were 44 aboard the C-54.

Meanwhile, mysterious SOS signals picked up by listening stations from Nome, Alaska, to Livermore, Calif., revived hopes that the passengers and crew aboard the Air Force transport lost 12 days may still be alive.

Ambrose Forced Out Of Post Office Job

By Melvin Altshuler and Sam Zagoria
Post Reporters

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson revealed last night that he forced his special assistant, Harold F. Ambrose, to resign because of his stamp deals with "speculators."

Seven men were involved in Ambrose's dealings, said Donaldson. They were, he added, "apparently gamblers who play for big stakes—race people."

The Postmaster General said Ambrose's transactions apparently have not violated any statutes of the Postal Code.

Ambrose is the husband of a niece of the wife of Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.). O'Mahoney said he had persuaded his wife's 38-year-old in-law to see Donaldson.

Although the Postmaster General said he did not know the sums involved, he said Ambrose told him he got into the scheme because of $14,000 debt incurred when a House committee forced

Crime Inquiry Told D. C. Needs Night Court, 650 More Police

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A House District Subcommittee, opening a detailed probe of Washington crime, yesterday heard these suggestions from the Metropolitan Police for improving law enforcement:

An increase in the police force from an authorized strength of about 1950 men to 2500 as a minimum and 2775 as a maximum.

Better pay and shorter hours for police to facilitate recruitment of new personnel.

Assignment to Washington of another United States commissioner or deputy, in addition to the one now here.

Opening of a night police court.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent, and his top aides of the Metropolitan Police Force, were the witnesses in the opening two-hour hearing. They will return for further testimony at 10 a. m. Thursday. There will be no session today.

The police officers were accompanied by Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel, who entered his appearance as counsel for the Police Department. He has been serving as liaison man between the District government and the committee.

The testimony yesterday was heard by District Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) chairman of the Special Crime Investigating Subcommittee, and Representatives Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) and Sid Simpson (R., Ill.).

Most of the session was given to presentation of a Police Department report on its operations and on crime figures. This was done by questions presented mostly by Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach to Inspector Floyd S. Truscott, assistant superin-

U. S. Is Past Changeover, Snyder Holds

By the United Press

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder yesterday said the Nation's economy has "safely" made the changeover from postwar inflation to a buyers' market, and is now in strong condition for "long-term economic progress."

In his annual report to Congress, Snyder asserted that the Treasury's fiscal policies have "played a vital part" in helping to avoid the postwar boom-and-bust predicted by many economists.

During the past 18 months, he said, the United States confounded the hopes of its Communist enemies and inspired new faith in its democratic allies by achieving what "many had thought impossible."

He said the "change-over from an economy of shortages" to a competitive market of ample supplies was made "without serious dislocations in industry and trade."

By the beginning of this year, he said, "it was generally agreed that business as a whole had safely gone through a readjustment to buyers' markets and had resumed its long-term economic progress."

He conceded that "some industries and localities" felt the pinch of the mid-1949 recession worse than others. He gave New England as an example, but said that

Vandenberg Returning To Hospital Today

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) is scheduled for "post-operative treatment" today at Georgetown Hospital, it was learned last night.

Nature of the treatment was not disclosed, but a family spokesman said it was not X-ray therapy.

Hospital officials said the 65-year-old Senator, who underwent a lung operation last October, would leave the hospital this afternoon, and is expected to resume his duties next week.

Suspended, Trial Ordered

Tipping Off Bookie Charged To Prince Georges Policeman

A Prince Georges County policeman was accused yesterday of tipping off a bookmaker friend that a police car was "planted" outside his betting headquarters.

Burgess

The County Commissioners ordered that the policeman, James H. Burgess, be tried by the police board February 21 at Upper Marlboro.

Burgess, attached to the Hyattsville station, was suspended at noon Saturday by Maj. Ralph W. Brown, superintendent of county police.

The County commissioners serve as the police board with Commissioner Norman H. Collins as the police board chairman. Collins told reporters this story:

Two detectives from county police headquarters at Upper Marlboro had been assigned to a "plant" on a suspected bookmaking establishment.

Burgess received a telephone call from his bookmaker friend, who asked him if he could trace the owner of the tags on a car that he had seen near his establishment.

Burgess obtained this information from the desk clerk at the Hyattsville station and then passed along to the bookmaker the name of the owner plus the information that he was a policeman.

Collins would not elaborate on this resume, the facts of which were verified by Major Brown. The police superintendent said he was first informed about the matter by a citizen.

Burgess has been on the county police force for about six years and lives in College Park.

He was involved in assault charges last November when Paul Schmick, Washington Star photographer, complained that Burgess had manhandled him while he was covering a news story.

After the Commissioners heard the charges, apologies were tendered and the matter was dropped.

Europe Seen Making Own Way by 1952

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The central organization of the 18 Marshall Plan countries yesterday made public an annual report that foresees a "manageable" situation for them in 1952, when American aid ends.

The report, released here and in Paris by the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, was considerably more optimistic than the annual statement a year ago.

At that time, the OEEC warned that the European nations' policies must be drastically changed. Otherwise, it said, at the end of the Marshall Plan they would face a deficit of three billion dollars a year in their trade with the dollar area.

Huge Import Cut Implied

That implied that after 1952 they would have been obliged to cut off three billion dollars worth of imports they had hoped for from this hemisphere. Such a cut would not have been tolerable, for the resulting economic upsets would have threatened the survival of their democratic governments, the OEEC thought.

This year's report finds a more hopeful outlook. It forecasts a balance-of-payments deficit for the fiscal year 1952-53 of two billion dollars for western Europe. This is still huge, but "generally manageable," in that it is not too big to be wrestled with through several different attacks.

Some of those methods of attack envisioned by the OEEC are:

1. "Dollar savings," by cutting imports from the United States, and substituting by buying from other soft-currency areas.

2. More "dollar earning," by higher exports to the United States, and by exports to other areas that earn dollars.

The report repeatedly emphasized, however, that the hopes were utterly on two basic assumptions being realized:

1. Continued Marshall Plan aid to Europe for the next two years, at 75 percent of the present rate for fiscal 1951, and 50 percent for fiscal 1952. This would be about three billion dollars in 1951, and two billion more for the last year.

2. Continuation of prosperous business activity in the United States, at least at the rate of the second and third quarters of 1949. Again and again, the report warned that there would be no chance for expanded European exports to the United States if levels of business activity here dropped appreciably.

The recession of 1949, it appeared, made a powerful impression on the OEEC of the truth of the adage that "when America gets a cold, Europe gets pneumonia."

If continued Marshall Plan aid, in adequate amounts, does not flow, the report said, the effects will be cumulative and disastrous. Hoped-for recovery levels cannot be obtained without it in the next two years.

May "Go Down a Bit"

Meantime, however, there was a hint yesterday that the participating nations might be disappointed.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said that Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman had indicated he will accept some cut in current ECA budget requests.

Hoffman appeared before the committee in a closed session yes-

U. S., Britain Back French In Indo-China

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States and Britain threw their diplomatic support yesterday behind the three new semi-independent states set up by the French in Indo-China.

The State Department announced full recognition of the three governments a few hours after the British Foreign Office had done likewise in London. Canada and other nations of the British Commonwealth, except for India, are expected to give similar recognition soon.

Nine days ago the Soviet Union recognized the rival government headed by the Moscow-trained Ho Chi-minh, who is leading a full-fledged war against 180,000 French troops in the hills of northeastern Indo-China. Communist China has also recognized Ho, and is expected to supply him with arms and other help on a large scale.

With Western support for one side and Soviet-Chinese support for the other, Indo-China can easily become the storm center of the whole struggle to check Soviet power in Asia.

The three newly recognized states, a little bigger than Texas in area, but with 24 million people, form one of the greatest rice-growing areas of the world.

The biggest and most important of them is Viet Nam, headed by the former Emperor Bao Dai with his capital at Saigon. The French formed this state out of the three ancient kingdoms of Tonkin, Annam and Cochin-China.

The two other states recognized yesterday are the native kingdoms of Cambodia and Laos, which chose to be separate instead of joining Viet Nam.

Each of the three will be self-governing in local affairs, but will be a member of the French Union, and will send representatives to the Council of the French Union in Paris. France will continue to control their defense and foreign affairs.

But the three will have some diplomatic relations of their own with foreign countries. A Minister will represent them collectively in Washington, and probably also in London and other major capitals.

The State Department announced yesterday that the United States Consulate General in Saigon would be raised to the status of a legation, with a Minister, still to be named, to be accredited to all three governments.

Undoubtedly the new situation in Indo-China will be reviewed at the conference of American Ambassadors scheduled to open next Monday in Bangkok, the capital of Siam. The State Department announced last night that all heads of American missions in southeast Asia, and also those in Australia and India, would attend the meeting.

U. S. Had Been Hesitant

W. Walton Butterworth, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs, and Philip C. Jessup, Ambassador at Large, will also be present.

Until about two months ago the United States was hesitant about recognizing the Bao Dai government in Viet Nam, and there was not even any idea of recognizing Cambodia and Laos as well.

But the French pushed insistently for recognition, and for military help for their hard-pressed army in Indo-China. The United States, in turn, urged the

Secret FBI Data Stuns Senator

Communists Reported to Have U. S. Fifth Column of 540,000

By The Associated Press

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was reported to have told Senators yesterday there are about 540,000 Communists and fellow-travelers now in the United States.

About one-tenth were described as card-carrying members of the Communist Party.

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) said: "I am flabbergasted. It is the most alarming thing I have heard in a long time. Just think what a powerful fifth column that would make if we ever got into a war."

Meanwhile, Senators indicated strong approval of Hoover's reported request for 300 new FBI agents to help tighten security lines around the Nation's atomic secrets.

For the third time in five days, Hoover talked with Senators behind closed doors about developments in the London atomic espionage case involving Dr. Klaus Fuchs, 38, a top British scientist, who is accused of passing American hydrogen bomb data to Moscow.

A committee member said Hoover can get "just about anything he wants."

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) told newsmen later that FBI records show there are 1250 card-carrying Communists in his State of Michigan, or about 12,500 Communists and fellow-travelers.

One informant said it was alleged in testimony that Fuchs had been in contact with Soviet agents in England on a twice-a-month basis.

The informant said Fuchs, who worked on United States atomic projects from 1943 to 1946, also contacted foreign agents in this country on a somewhat lesser scale. The German-born scientist was a member of the official British atomic mission which helped develop the A-bomb in the United States. He became a British citizen in 1942.

Einstein Aide Pleads Ignorance of Fuchs

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 7 (AP).—Albert Einstein's secretary said today she knew nothing of Klaus Fuchs, key figure in the British spy probe.

Washington reports said the famed physicist had obtained the former German scientist's release from a Canadian internment camp in 1940.

Einstein's secretary and housekeeper, Helen Dukas, said she could find no record of any such appeal on behalf of Fuchs in Einstein's correspondence file

Carol Ann Paight and brother, Carl Paight, after verdict

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 7 (AP).—Blond Carol Ann Paight was acquitted by an all-parent jury tonight in the mercy slaying of her cancer-ridden father.

The 21-year-old college girl, calm during most of her trial, slumped almost to the floor when she heard the verdict. Sobbingly, she said, "I'm very happy. I'm grateful to the jury."

By its verdict, the jurors accepted, in effect, the defense claim that Carol Ann, charged with second degree murder, was temporarily insane when she shot a bullet through the head of her father, Police Sergt. Carl Paight, last September 23.

As the jury foreman, Mrs. Judith A. Memhard, pronounced the verdict, a wave of approval swept the courtroom.

Carol Ann's mother sobbed.

"It's just wonderful. I'm so happy."

A crowd of spectators lingered in the corridors for more than half an hour to shout, "Good luck, Carol!"

She said she expects to return to New England College at Henniker, N. H., after a rest.

DP Program In Maryland Under Attack

By John W. Ball

Widespread dissatisfaction among farmers in the Washington area over the resettlement of displaced persons on nearby farms was given pointed expression in Anne Arundel County, Md., yesterday.

There the three-man committee, appointed by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., to direct the resettlement program, resigned. A stinging criticism of the conduct of the DP program, which the three called "slovenly" as well as "wholly inefficient and uncoordinated," accompanied their resignation.

"We have been bitterly disillusioned," Benjamin Watkins 3d of Davidsonville, chairman; Charles B. Lynch and J. Irving King wrote. "Our experiences force us to the conclusion that the program as now operated is not in the best interests of the Maryland farmer,

New Orleans Buys Canadian Spuds; They're Cheaper

New Orleans, Feb. 7 (AP).—A million pounds of potatoes imported from Canada were unloaded from a boat today while the Government, with a lapful of price-supported spuds, offered its surplus to farmers for 1 cent a hundred pounds.

J. Segari, New Orleans food broker and consignee of the Canadian potatoes, said the economics of the dilemma were too deep for him.

"I don't know why I can buy choice potatoes from Canada and have them shipped down here cheaper than I can buy them from Maine or Idaho—but I know I can do it," he said. "Why, a boatload comes into Savannah, Ga., Tampa, Fla., Jacksonville, Fla., and other places about every two weeks," he said.

Virginia Bill Would End Rent Controls

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7.—The Boatwright bill to abolish rent controls in Virginia emerged from the House General Laws Committee today with a favorable 15-2 vote.

After the committee came out of a closed session, Delegates Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria and Frank P. Moncure of Stafford said they voted against repeal of the presen. law.

Boothe said he believes controls should be removed "on the local level," as the law now permits. Moncure, who had said he favors lifting controls generally, said he voted "no" because of "the situation at Quantico."

A highlight of a public hearing last week was testimony by Army, Navy and Marine personnel that removal of controls would work a hardship on servicemen renting property in nearby Washington, the Hampton Roads area and Quantico.

If enacted, the Boatwright bill would require the Federal Housing Expediter to lift rent controls throughout the State within 15 days after being notified of passage of the law.

Judge Hands Out Economics Lesson With Sentence

Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday gave a defendant a streamlined course in economics in one simple lesson.

The pupil was Henry B. White, no fixed address, charged with being drunk and carrying a dangerous weapon—a knife.

"Are you working?" queried Casey.

"No, Your Honor. Business isn't very good."

"When do you think conditions will be better?"

"Oh, about April," White answered airily.

Casey glanced at his calendar.

"No," he corrected, "May. Ninety days on the weapons charge—$10 or 10 days for drunkenness.

Cardozo Transfer to Central Urged by D. C. Capitol Leaders

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

District leaders in the House and Senate last night separately urged the District Board of Education to approve promptly transfer of Negro students from Cardozo High to Central High School.

The board's committee on buildings and grounds has recommended the shift, transferring Central to Negro use, and will hold a final public hearing at 10 a. m. Friday in the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw. The full board will vote on the proposal Wednesday.

Representative Joe Bates (D., Ky.), chairman of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations, disclosed last night he had been "directed" by his subcommittee to write C. Melvin Sharpe, board president, "requesting" the Cardozo-to-Central transfer.

The letter, he said, points out that recent House hearings on the District school budget indicate the proposed transfer "would be a good way of relieving overcrowding at Cardozo High and might save the expense of constructing new school buildings."

The subcommittee action followed a recent inspection of Central and Cardozo schools by Representative Foster Furcale (D., Mass.).

On the Senate side, Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) of the Senate District Committee, issued a formal statement on the school controversy.

In view of the "critical school situation" in the District, he said he sincerely hopes "that the Board of Education will adopt the recommendation of its committee on school buildings and construction, and that Central High School will be promptly made available to the Cardozo High School pupils, some of whom are now on triple shift."

Under the board's committee resolution about 1700 Cardozo students would be shifted to Central, whose 1300 pupils would be transferred to other white schools.

370,000 Men Out

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Railroads began seizing coal shipments to keep their locomotives going, as 370,000 soft-coal miners stayed away from the pits for a second day yesterday.

The worsening coal shortage also forced Gov. Adlai Stevenson to order Illinois' four State teachers' colleges, with 7200 students, to close down today in order to save depleted coal stocks for the State welfare and penal institutions.

In the midst of the coal crisis, the President's special board of inquiry, set up under the national emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, met here yesterday and moved quickly to investigate the long dispute between John L. Lewis and the soft coal operators.

The three-man board called in top Government officials to closed-door hearings and were believed to have held secret, separate meetings with Lewis and representatives of the operators during the evening and night. The board invited the operators and the United Mine Workers to present their cases before the board in public sessions today beginning at 10 a. m. in the Interdepartmental Auditorium. There was no word from the union, but it was believed Lewis will testify this morning before the board.

Hearings to End Thursday

The panel—which includes Chairman David Cole, William W. Wirtz and John T. Dunlop, all outstanding labor arbitrators—plans to complete its hearings by Thursday afternoon, and then push ahead to complete its fact-finding report for the President by the Monday deadline.

Upon receipt of the report, the President will be enabled to ask the Federal Court for an injunction ordering the miners back to the pits for 80 days.

Meanwhile, with the railroads down to two weeks' supply of coal or less, some of the lines began to take advantage of an emergency Interstate Commerce Commission order permitting the railroads to take over coal and pay the owner the invoice price.

Airliner Lands Without Mishap On One Good Tire

New York, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—A big, grinning airline captain strolled among the 18 passengers aboard his TWA Stratoliner tonight and assured them he could land them safely despite the plane's blown-out left tire. Then he ambled back to the controls and did it.

After circling New York for an hour to use up gasoline and lessen danger of fire if he crashed, Capt. Reginald Plumridge jockeyed the four-engined airliner carefully down on its right wheel at La-Guardia Field.

He let the plane's weight fall gradually on the flat left tire as it lost flying speed, and halfway down the runway the plane plop-plopped to a safe stop, ending its flight from Pittsburgh with 18 passengers and 4 crew members.

Adm. Strauss Quits Atomic Energy Post

Harris & Ewing
ADM. LEWIS L. STRAUSS
"The issues . . . are now resolved"

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Lewis L. Strauss, banker and wartime admiral, yesterday resigned as a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, effective April 15. He was one of two members of the commission who favored going ahead without delay in the development of the hydrogen or superbomb.

In his letter of resignation to President Truman, Admiral Strauss said:

"The issues involving national security which were my primary concern are now resolved as I had hoped and recommended."

This was taken to refer to his stand that the H-bomb be developed. Aligned with him on this was Gordon Dean, newest member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Gives Dinner for Lilienthal

Other members favored more consideration of America's whole defense and foreign policies. They hoped to use the H-bomb as a level to rescue the world from the threat of a great crisis.

The differences in the commission never reached a personal stage. Last evening Admiral Strauss gave a dinner in honor of David E. Lilienthal, whose resignation as commission chairman becomes effective February 15.

So far as is known, President Truman has not yet found men to succeed Lilienthal and Strauss.

Admiral Strauss, who has a farm near Charlottesville, Va., wanted to retire as far back as last spring. One of his reasons for staying was the problem of what was to be done about the H-bomb, a problem that was resolved in part last week when Mr. Truman directed the commission to go ahead with its development.

Truman Lauds Strauss Service

Mr. Truman, in accepting Strauss' resignation, said he could understand why, after nine years in public service, he wanted to return to private pursuits. He added:

"In the years which have elapsed since you were called to active duty in the Navy, you have fulfilled every obligation of patriotic service—in the field of preparedness, during the period of hostilities, and as a member of the Atomic Energy Commission now for nearly three and one-half years.

"Your service with the commission has been during a critical and formative period and your counsels have been invaluable. From your experience in military and business affairs you have made a contribution of utmost value in the development of the atomic energy program and the policies under which it operates . . . Your personal concern and your diligence are reflected especially in the medical and military phases of the program and in the security policies developed by the commission."

Mr. Truman told Admiral Strauss that he hoped to have the benefit of his advice and counsel in the future.

Clergy Sees World Facing State of Flux

Today's world is headed toward a "confused state somewhere between peace and a war of annihilation," a group of Illinois Methodist ministers said yesterday in answer to a questionnaire.

The delegation of 60 ministers is in Washington for a three-day seminar on world affairs under the theme "An Audit of Mid-Century America." American University is cooperating in the venture.

In answer to an opinion survey, 47 of the ministers said the world was headed for the confused state between war and peace.

Two thought it was headed for an era of peace and two said it was in for almost total destruction. Eight thought it was headed for constructive cooperation through the United Nations.

President Truman had no alternative except to produce the hydrogen bomb, 31 of the ministers said. Only three said it was a wise step, five thought it was sinful, and 20 thought it was misguided.

Mr. Truman didn't do so well in a poll on the living American best suited to serve as President. He received only one vote, the same number chalked up by Dewey, MacArthur, and Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, among others.

The badly split presidential field was headed by former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, now president of the University of Pennsylvania, who rolled up 14 votes.

On the question of present United States foreign policy, 42 of the ministers said it is fairly intelligent, 17 called it completely inept and unwise, and none thought it was as wise as possible.

Dividend Check Mailing to GIs Beats Schedule

Mailing of dividends for GI insurance is close to a half million checks over schedule, the Veterans Administration and Treasury Department reported yesterday. Checks mailed to date total $681,607,929.39.

Original goal of Veterans Administration and Treasury was 200,000 checks a day. But in 17 working days, the agencies said, 3,839,654 checks have been mailed.

Yesterday, for example, 224,578 checks went out.

Reds' Lawyers Win New Jail Term Delays

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Five lawyers and one defendant in the Communist conspiracy trial today won a new postponement of the date on which they must begin jail sentences for contempt of court.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted the delay in reserving judgment on the appeals of the six from contempt sentences imposed at the end of the conspiracy trial last fall.

The sentences now are scheduled to begin May 2, one day after the attorneys are to file briefs in the appeal of 11 Communist leaders from their conviction on charges of conspiring to advocate overthrow of the United States Government by force.

Those involved in the contempt case are Eugene Dennis, who acted as his own lawyer; and attorneys Harry Sacher and Abraham J. Isserman, New York; Richard Gladstein of Los Angeles, George W. Crockett, jr., of Detroit and Louis F. McCabe of Philadelphia.

Their sentences range from 30 days to six months.

Judge Harold R. Medina, in citing the lawyers and Dennis for contempt, accused them of entering into an agreement to obstruct justice.

Court Upholds Coast Guard License Denial

Judge Burnita Matthews in District Court yesterday held that the Coast Guard has the right to deny licenses to merchant marine radio operators affiliated with or sympathetic to "subversive" groups.

Judge Matthews denied a preliminary injunction against the Coast Guard asked by three operators who had denied licenses. She held that the law giving the Coast Guard power to grant such licenses also authorized denial of licenses on any reasonable grounds.

The three operators are Earl Gove, jr., of Bristol, Vt.; George W. Sayre and Leonard Lazar, both of New York City.

Victor Rabinowitz, attorney for the three, declared the Coast Guard commandant exceeded the authority granted in the law. In addition, the denial "seemed to be the first instance in which the Government has denied license required for private employment on so-called loyalty grounds," Rabinowitz added.

The attorney said Gove admitted he was a member of the Communist Party, but challenged the right of the Coast Guard to deny him a license on those grounds. Sayre denied he was a member of the Communist Party, but admitted he had been about 12 years ago, the attorney continued. The third radio operator, Lazar, refused to answer the question whether he was a Communist, he added.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay conducted the Government's request for a dismissal.

Education Aid Bills To Be Studied by Staff

The House Education and Labor Committee met briefly on Federal aid to education yesterday and then recessed until Thursday to give its staff experts time to study about a dozen pending bills.

The committee is split over whether parochial schools should receive some of the 300 million dollars a year in Federal benefits proposed in a Senate-passed measure.

Second Ex-Red Tells of Seeing Christoffel With Communists

By the United Press

Government prosecutors produced a seconl ex-Communist yesterday who swore he had seen Harold R. Christoffel, former Milwaukee labor leader, in the company of Reds.

Farrel Schnering, machinist for a Milwalkee implement company, testified at Christoffel's second perjury trial here that he spotted Christoffel with Communist Party members on at least four occasions.

Two of the times, he said, the former head of the Allis-Chalmers local of the United Auto Workers (CIO) was with Eugene Dennis, secretary of the Wisconsin Communist Party in the mid-30s, and now its national secretary.

Christoffel is accused of lying when he told the House Labor Committee in March, 1947, he never was a Communist. His first conviction was set aside by the Supreme Court because the Government had not proved a quorum was present. Thirteen committee members since have testified they heard him make the statement.

Schnering, who said he was a Communist from 1931 until 1935, asserted he also saw Christoffel munching hamburgers with Fred Bassett Blair, whom he described as a well-known Wisconsin Communist. He added he stumbled across the defendant with Emil Costello, alleged party member, in June, 1940, at an American Youth Congress meeting at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Yesterday Louis F. Budenz, another former Communist who now teaches economics at Fordham University, testified Christoffel was introduced to him as "a good Bolshevik" when Budenz was still a member of the party.

Defense Attorney O. John Rogge recalled him to the stand today for a stiff cross-examination.

"After 10 years of lying for the Communists, how do you expect us to believe you're telling the truth now?" Rogge shot at him.

Budenz had no chance to answer. Government objections were upheld by Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

Rogge characterized Budenz and Schnering as "former communists who have traded in their party card for a meal ticket." He referred to fees Budenz has received for testifying as an "expert" on Communist matters.

Korean Aid Bill Ready for House Vote on Thursday

By the United Press

The Administration's revamped 60-million-dollar Korean aid bill cleared its first House hurdle today and appeared headed for final passage Thursday.

The bill was debated as Republicans in both Houses renewed their attacks on President Truman's hands-off-Formosa policy.

The House agreed by voice vote to act on the Korean bill. Defeated once, it was overhauled to meet GOP objections by extending until June 30 the present February 15 cut-off on economic aid to Formosa.

Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), who led the opposition that killed the earlier version two weeks ago by a one-vote margin, said he will vote for the new measure but still considers it "strictly rat-hole money."

Bridges Tells of His Background

San Francisco, Feb. 7 (AP).—Harry Bridges gave his account of life and strife on the world's waterfronts, and of the rise of maritime unionism, as he began his personal effort today to gain an acquittal in his perjury trial.

The lean, sharp-faced Australian-born president of the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union is accused of lying at his American naturalization hearing in 1934, when he testified under oath that he was not, and never had been, a Communist.

The question of Communist affiliation never came up today, at his first session on the witness stand. Defense Lawyer Vincent Hallinan devoted it all to recording Bridges' background.

Bridges appeared entirely relaxed.

Judy Sought Job With CIA, Jury Is Told

New York, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Judith Coplon wanted to get into the Central Intelligence Agency, which handles counterespionage outside the United States, her former boss testified today.

At Miss Coplon's espionage-conspiracy trial with Valentin Gubitchev, William E. Foley of the Justice Department was asked on crossexamination if he knew anything of the former Government girl's ambitions. He replied she tried to get an appointment to the Central Intelligence Agency.

Foley, chief of the internal security and foreign agents registration sections of the Justice Department, testified he once took Miss Coplon home in a cab on a rainy night. But he said he left her at her door.

No Personal Affection

Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan interrupted to ask: "Was there any personal affection between you?"

"None whatsoever," said Foley, a bachelor.

Foley denied that when he handed Miss Coplon a "decoy" memorandum last March 4 on orders from his superiors that he knowingly participated in the trap set for her by the FBI. But he admitted he knew at the time she was suspected of espionage and suspected she was being tested.

Foley testified he thought some of the information contained in the memo was "shocking intelligence" and for this reason doubted its accuracy.

"Did it look suspiciously like a plant?" demanded Abraham Pomerantz, Gubitchev's attorney.

"You might say it that way," Foley replied. But he pointed out there was a distinction between knowledge and suspicion.

Gets Top Secret Report

Judge Ryan granted defense lawyers permission to confront Foley with FBI microphone and telephone recordings of conversations with Miss Coplon.

"You may ask the witness if he made certain statements," Ryan said. "If the witness denies making such statements, you may then, at the appropriate time, play the recordings to show the jury the contradiction."

He said the "appropriate time" would be during presentation of the defense.

Bigger Police Force Urged for District

tendent of police. Some 30 persons other than officials and newspapermen attended the hearing.

On the crime picture, Truscott at Fischbach's request presented the following breakdown of serious offenses in Washington committed by white persons and by Negroes in the fiscal year which ended last June 30.

Breakdown Given

He said 11,541 persons were arrested for crimes of violence. Of these 2370 were male white native-born and 283 were female white native-born; 42 were male white foreign-born and 26 female foreign born; 7715 were Negro males, 1085 were Negro females and 20 were other persons.

For murder, he said eight white persons and 40 Negroes were arrested; for manslaughter, one white and six Negroes; for negligent homicide, nine white and five Negroes; for rape, 23 white and 141 Negroes; for attempted rape, 12 white and 26 Negroes; for robbery, 220 white and 667 Negroes; for attempted robbery, 23 white and 66 Negroes; for aggravated assault, 381 white and 2651 Negroes; for burglary, 640 white and 2322 Negroes; for attempted housebreaking 20 whites and 123 Negroes. Other crimes included in the total were larceny and auto theft.

Under Fischbach's questions, Truscott also estimated that 589,000 of the District population is white and 274,000 is nonwhite—68.3 percent and 31.7 percent.

Truscott said that for offenses other than those included in the "crimes of violence" group and traffic cases, there were 76,191 arrests. Of these, 32,112 were native white male, 3927 were native white female; 1119 were foreign-born white male; 195 foreign-born white female; 33,335 were Negro male; 5340 were Negro female, and 163 were other persons.

Truscott said traffic arrests totaled 152,026.

To another series of questions, Truscott reported that the Second Precinct was staffed with the largest number of men of any of the 14 precincts because that area has the heaviest crime rate The precinct is bounded by K st. nw. on the south, S st. nw. on the north, 15th st. nw on the west, and by North Capitol and 1st and 2d sts. ne. on the east.

141 Men Listed

He listed the Second Precinct with 141 men, the First Precinct with 134 and the Thirteenth Precinct with 125 men as the most heavily staffed precincts. The First Precinct covers the area south of the Second down to the Mall; the Thirteenth covers the area north of the Second as far as Euclid st. and projecting westward to Rock Creek Park.

Representative Simpson asked Truscott "what makes the Second precinct so bad" in terms of the crime rate.

"The primary reason in my opinion is its heavy proportion of colored people," Truscott replied.

Representative Teague asked what crimes predominate there.

The crimes include every kind from murders down to misdemeanors, Truscott replied.

Teague suggested it might be the result of a large number of drinking places, but Truscott said the proportion of drinking places was no higher there than in other sections.

Sites Movement

Truscott went on to say that the Second Precinct is an area from which the better elements are steadily moving out to be replaced by the poorer elements moving in.

"Are conditions there getting better or worse?" asked Simpson.

"In my opinion, they are not getting any better," Truscott replied.

In the last fiscal year, Truscott reported, the Police Department veraged a working force of men assigned to the detection and prevention of crime of about 305 men on each of the three daily shifts.

He said there was a daily average of 45 men on special details, 15 men in court during duty hours, and 340 on administrative and clerical duties, with another 440 on leave for various reasons. This left a daily average of about 916 men to be divided between three shifts for "detection and prevention" of crime. He said some details "practically denude" the precincts of patrolmen.

Under questioning by Simpson, Truscott reported the average take-home pay of police privates of the lowest rank is about $48 to $55 a week, depending on number of dependents. He pointed out police work a six-day week—that firemen work the same but under a recent law will get a five-day week when appropriations for it are made.

He said long hours and low pay discourage recruitment of new men, and that at no time in recent years has the Police Department obtained enough recruits to get up to authorized strength.

Inspector Walter Storm, in charge of communications, records, and training, said he had seen many prospective police recruits lose interest when told they would have to work a 6-day week.

"Do you agree," Representative Simpson asked Truscott "that it's hard to get men to work six days a week for $50 a week when they can get shorter hours and better pay in Government or private industry?"

"It is hard," said Truscott. "We've had much difficulty."

Other Difficulties

Fischbach asked Truscott "isn't it practically impossible to recruit the type of men needed to protect the public from the criminal element at existing salaries?"

"Yes, it is," said Truscott.

Representative Simpson asked whether a night court would help the police. Truscott replied that it would be helpful in many ways, particularly if the police were given a reasonable increase in their force to compensate for the men that would have to leave their work to go to court.

Truscott said the night court would be a convenience to citizens as well as to the police. He said it might also stimulate men on night duty to make arrests that they might not now make because of the necessity of taking the cases to court in the daytime during their off-duty hours.

Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, told the subcommittee that the only way his men can now get a search and seizure warrant at night is to contact U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. If they can't find Lawrence, said Inspector Bryant, they have to wait for Court to open the next morning.

Fischbach asked whether it would help to have a judge assigned to night duty from 4 p.m. to midnight to sign warrants for the police. Truscott said he felt another United States Commissioner or a deputy commissioner would be more helpful.

Ambrose Forced Out of Postoffice Position

suspension of a nondepartmental "newsletter" publication in 1945.

Donaldson said he received Ambrose's resignation January 11 "with prejudice, which is tantamount to removal." Ambrose, with the exception of World War II Army service, has been with the Post Office since O'Mahoney helped him get a job in 1933.

The "speculators" were identified by Donaldson only as men from Washington, Baltimore, Toledo and New York.

Donaldson said he had no idea how much money was involved.

The Associated Press quoted unnamed officials as saying they understood nearly $400,000 had been invested by Ambrose's contacts before the scheme backfired.

Donaldson said Ambrose had been involved in the "deals" for the past 18 months. As described by the Postmaster General, Ambrose's system was this:

He approached his contacts and told them that "a lot of money could be made on commemorative issues."

He would then show them stamp catalogs.

Catalog Used

"Of course," said Donaldson, "the catalog value is above the real value among dealers." Sometimes stamps are sold as much as 20 to 60 percent below catalog figures, but the speculators did not know this.

Ambrose, according to Donaldson, would tell his contacts he could obtain a stamp at face value and resell it at the higher catalog value.

Ambrose told his "speculators," said the Postmaster, that he could make 50 percent profit on each transaction and would split the profits.

Actually, Donaldson asserted, the stamps he offered were ones on sale by the Philatelic Agency of the Post Office.

In the 18 months of the scheme, said Donaldson, Ambrose would pay off his early buyers with money for stamp investments received from later speculators.

Word of Ambrose's dealings reportedly reached Donaldson through a highly dissatisfied "investor."

"A stamp collector," said Donaldson, "would have known better." He said positively that Ambrose "actually neither bought nor sold stamps."

Ambrose's duties were such, the Postmaster continued, that he had no contact with stamps or departmental funds.

Post office officials said Ambrose worked directly under Donaldson. Ambrose's duties, as outlined by his superior, were those of a public relations man in the department's information service. His salary was $10,000 a year.

But Senator O'Mahoney said last Friday he received a telephone call from a nattorney, whom he would not identify, claiming to represent the investors.

The lawyer told him, O'Mahoney said, that Ambrose met the "speculators" at a race track. What track, O'Mahoney didn't know.

"Speech Writer"

O'Mahoney described his in-law as a "gifted speech writer for the Post Office Department." Donaldson said Ambrose had never written speeches for him.

Donaldson said he was confident Ambrose had never used the mails in his schemes but relied instead on "personal contacts."

Donaldson said he had not seen Ambrose since January 11, when the resignation became effective. Since that date, he revealed, postal inspectors have been investigating Ambrose's actions.

Married, the father of five children, Ambrose lives at 4701 31st st. S., in the Fairlington section of Arlington County. Last night he was reported en route back to Washington from Winchester, Mass., where he was visiting his parents.

Ambrose was involved about three years ago in an investigation made by a House Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Canfield (R., N. J.).

It brought out at hearings that he was editing and publishing a newsletter which he sold to postmasters throughout the Nation at a subscription price of $10 a year. At the time, the committee learned, Ambrose was on leave from the department although his name was still carried on its personnel rolls.

Requested Resignation

Committee members objected that the postmasters, knowing Ambrose was an official of the department, might feel obligated to subscribe to the newsletter, profits of which went to him rather than the department.

Postmaster General Donaldson agreed with this view, and ordered its publication halted.

Senator O'Mahoney said Ambrose came to see him three weeks ago at Mrs. Ambrose's urging. At that time, the Senator said, he told Ambrose he had an "obligation to see the Postmaster General."

Presumably when he did, his resignation was requested.

O'Mahoney explained that he helped Ambrose get a $2400-a-year job in the Postoffice Department in 1933. At that time, O'Mahoney was First Assistant Postmaster under James A. Farley.

But since then, the Senator declared, Ambrose has "moved up on his own."

Births, Deaths In District Show 1950 Decrease

So far this year fewer persons have died in the District and fewer babies have been born than in the corresponding period last year.

The Health Department announced the death rate for the first four weeks of 1950 was 9.5 per 1000 population. Last year in the same period it was 10.5.

Number of births reported for 1950 was 1319, compared to 1910 last year. Department officials said the birth rate has been decreasing since 1947.

Nation 'Safely' Past Inflation

even in the hardest-hit areas, employment has turned up again.

Snyder made no direct reference to the fact that President Truman's budget for the coming fiscal year provides for $5,100,000,000 Federal deficit.

But he sharply criticized the income tax cut voted by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress, and praised Mr. Truman's recent message asking for "some increase in taxation" to start the Nation toward a balanced budget.

Snyder said that in prosperous times taxes should be high enough not only to pay for current Government spending but also to "leave a surplus" that could be applied to reducing the 252-billion-dollar Federal debt.

While stressing that it is up to Congress to say how big the debt will be, Snyder said the Treasury has "a crucial role" in managing the debt "in such a way as to promote the financial health" of the economy.

"The Treasury has met this challenge," he said, by "the wide distribution of the debt among the individual citizens and business concerns of the Nation."

2 in Montgomery Convicted In Pinball Gambling Cases

A woman tavern keeper was fined $150 and her bartender forfeited $100 collateral in pinball gambling cases before Silver Spring Police Court yesterday.

Miss Ida Bassin, 33, of River rd., Bethesda, operator of a tavern on the Rockvile pike near Garrett Park, was assessed $150 or 30 days in jail. She was convicted of setting up a gaming table, a race-horse type pinball machine.

Earl Wagner, 26, of Kensington, bartender in the Bassin tavern, was allowed to forfeit $100 collateral, on charges of playing a pinball machine for money and paying off on a pinball machine.

Judge Wiliam B. Wheeler imposed sentence.

Police Pvt. Howard Musgrove testified that on October 28 he played the machine and won 30 free games, for which Wagner paid him one bottle of beer, one bag of peanuts and $1.25. Miss Bassin was standing in the immediate vicinity when he was paid, Musgrove testified. She denied paying off on the machine.

Miss Bassin and Wagner were the last of eight persons, arrested in Montgomery County gambling raids November 8, to stand trial. All were convicted and received stiff sentences. Two have appealed.

Senate Unit Backs Co-Op Housing Plan

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of six to one the Housing subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee yesterday approved the Administration's new housing program including the middle-income and cooperative-housing sections.

Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) was the only member of the subcommittee voting against the measure. He will file a minority report. Those voting for it were Subcommittee Chairman John Sparkman (D., Ala.), Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), Russell Long (D., La.), Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) and Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.).

Several changes aimed at strengthening the section dealing with cooperatives were adopted by the subcommittee, Sparkman told reporters.

The amount of reserves for the two-billion-dollar cooperative program was increased from one-eighth of 1 percent to one-fourth of 1 percent.

Capital Stock Increased

The amount of capital stock required of cooperatives was increased from 7½ percent to 10 percent, the amount to be paid at the rate of 2½ percent on application, 2½ percent at the granting of the loan and the other 5 percent in 20 years.

This, in effect, makes the Government liability 95 percent of each loan. The cooperatives must be of a nonprofit nature. It is required that the membership be made up predominantly of middle-income families. The administrator is required to see that element of speculation for profit is eliminated.

On motion of Douglas the "middle income" program will be administered by a separate agency directed by an administrator appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

On motion of Maybank it was directed that not more than 10 percent of the funds provided for in the bill would be allotted to any one State.

250,00 Units Initially

The new agency will be called the National Mortgage Corp. for Housing Cooperatives.

The Maybank amendment applying to the entire bill is intended to remove the charge that the distribution of funds will be used for political purposes.

Sparkman estimated that the loans, plus investments of the cooperatives, would build 250,000 units initially.

The full committee will meet Thursday to take up the whole bill.

Legion Again Hits Hoover Unit Plans

Some 600 State commanders and service officers of the American Legion were told yesterday that one effect of the Hoover Commission's recommendations would be to wreck the Civil Service and destroy veterans' preference.

This was but one of the charges leveled against the plans of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report at the opening regular session of the Legion's national rehabilitation conference.

The first day of the Legion's twenty-seventh annual conference was largely devoted to following up and enlarging on the attacks against the Hoover Report made by George N. Craig, Legion national commander, at a preconference banquet Monday night.

Lawrence J. Fenlon of Chicago, national economics chairman of the Legion, asserted the Civil Service changes proposed in the Hoover Report would "freeze the veteran out of all Government jobs" by destroying the Veterans Preference Act of 1944.

The Civil Service would be wrecked by removing its enforcement powers on legislation, he declared. This would open the door to a return of politics and the spoils system in Civil Service, he said.

E. V. Cliff, member of the Legion's national rehabilitation commission, said closing the doors of Government hospitals to veterans with nonservice connected disabilities would overburden even more the facilities of State hospitals.

Most nonservice connected cases have chronic ailments such as tuberculosis or mental troubles, he said.

John Thomas Taylor, legislative consultant for the Legion, said under the "double talk" of the Hoover Report recommendations, veterans' affairs would be in "utter chaos."

Today's meeting will include discussions of veterans' claims, insurance, Board of Veterans Appeals and the War Claims Commission.

Tax Sought on Union Profits

By The Associated Press

The Treasury bid yesterday for taxes on profits which labor unions and charitable and educational groups get from sideline businesses.

It told the House Ways and Means Committee, whittling away at plugs for tax loopholes as requested by President Truman, that regular corporation levies should apply to income from business "not incident or related to the exempt purpose" of the organization.

It gave examples which appeared to rule out taxation on some big outside incomes.

The Treasury said it might be able to get the money under existing law. But it said to do so would require lengthy litigation and "it seems highly desirable for Congress to provide clearly that such will be the result."

Mr. Truman in his tax message to Congress two weeks ago mentioned loopholes which he said have developed through abuse of the exemption allowed educational and charitable institutions. He did not, however, mention labor unions as the Treasury did.

Gain of 500 Millions Seen

The Treasury estimates that plugging loopholes such as Mr. Truman mentioned could bring in 500 million dollars to offset part of 635 million dollars in excise tax cuts which Mr. Truman proposed.

The Treasury gave some examples: a university book store could sell textbooks to students; an agricultural college could run a wheat farm in connection with its education program; a social club could sell food to its members—all free of tax.

Among other traditional sources of tax-exempt income for such organizations the Treasury enumerated interest, dividends, royalties, rents, capital gains, dues, contributions, assessments, gifts, grants and the like.

"Only the unrelated business would be taxed—the spark plug or chinaware factory run by a university," the Treasury said.

Before it went into the question of tax-exempt organizations, the Ways and Means Committee heard from the Treasury about "collapsible" motion picture corporations.

U. N. Asked to Watch Soviets in Formosa

Lake Success, Feb. 7 (AP).—Nationalist China asked today for United Nations air and naval observers to watch for any direct Russian role in Red China's expected assault on Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa Island retreat.

The Nationalists contended Russia should be kicked out of the U. N. For interfering in China, but said they realized a majority was not ready to go that far.

The Russians, meanwhile, carried on their walkout campaign to have the U. N. throw out the Nationalist Chinese and seat Communist Chinese.

Besides calling for observers, Nationalist Delegate T. F. Tsiang urged the Little Assembly to:

1. Ban military and economic aid to Red China from any quarter.

2. Hand down a moral judgment against Russia on charges she helped Mao Tze-Tung's Peiping Reds in their conquest of the mainland.

The Nationalists thus asked the United Nations to do what the United States has refused to do—send a mission to Formosa or intervene in any way.

The little Assembly listened to Tsiang in silence. Shortly afterwards it adjourned to think over his 43-minute appeal.

As Tsiang spoke, the Russian, Polish and Czechoslovak delegates in the Economic and Social Council walked out after failing on a 3-to-10 vote to oust the Nationalist delegation.

Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia voted for the ouster; the United States, China, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Chile, Iran, Mexico, Peru and Canada voted against it; Britain, France, India, Pakistan and Denmark abstained.

The Council elected Hernan Santa Cruz of Chile, an outspoken foe of the Russians, chairman for 1950, and went on with its business.

NEW STATES—The United States and Britain yesterday recognized Viet Nam (black), Laos (horizontal lines) and Cambodia (cross-hatched). The Communist-led army under Ho Chi-minh is fighting French troops in the Tonkin area, in the northeast, and is threatening the city of Hanoi. Bao Dai, the head of the Viet Nam government, has his capital at Saigon, where the United States consulate-general will become a legation

U. S. and Britain Recognize Paris-Aided Indo-China States

French to hurry with their parliamentary ratification of the agreement reached with Bao Dai last March, and with similar agreements with Cambodia and Laos.

At the recent meeting of British Commonwealth Foreign Ministers at Colombo, Ceylon, a strong plea for Bao Dai came from Malcolm MacDonald, the British high commissioner stationed at Singapore.

MacDonald had visited Indo-China and had come away convinced of the strength and stability of Bao Dai's government.

The result was that Britain and the Dominions decided to recognize him as soon as the French finished ratifying. Only Prime Minister Nehru of India stood aside, arguing that Bao Dai was not really independent and that he still had to prove his title to recognition.

The French ratified last week, by big parliamentary majorities, and the United States as well as Britain decided to take the plunge. Although Secretary Acheson said in his Press Club speech that the United States could do comparatively little to help southeast Asia, the French army in Indo-China is likely to get American military help, perhaps out of the 75 million dollars earmarked by Congress for use in "the general area" of China.

The State Department announcement yesterday said American recognition "is consistent with our fundamental policy of giving support to the peaceful and democratic evolution of dependent peoples toward self-government and independence."

It predicted greater political stability and "the growth of effective democratic institutions in Indo-China" out of the present and future agreements with the French.

"This Government," it added, "is considering what steps it may take at this time to further these objectives, and to assure, in collaboration with other like-minded nations, that this development shall not be hindered by internal dissension fostered from abroad."

Reds Moving Troops Into "Jumpoff" Area

Taipei, Feb. 7 (AP).—The Red conqueror of Shanghai today was reported to have moved powerful forces into Fukien Province opposite Formosa, possibly to mount an invasion of this island fortress.

The Defense Ministry said Communist Gen. Chen Yi sent his veteran Tenth Army Group into Fukien to stamp out Nationalist guerillas.

Independent quarters thought that was too much like using cannon to kill gnats. They believed it more likely preparations were under way for the predicted Communist invasion of Formosa.

'Bossy Wac,' Says Ft. Myer Soldier, AWOL 3 Years

A Fort Myer Army sergeant, AWOL three years, gave himself up to military authorities at Buffalo, N. Y., yesterday, according to the United Press.

First Sergt. James V. Griffith, 33, who had been in the Army three years, was stationed at Fort Myer for 10 months, the Army said, before he got fed up with military life.

"I couldn't stand taking orders from a Wac captain," was Griffith's reported explanation.

Shipload of Toys From U. S. Tots Sails for Europe

Philadelphia, Feb. 7 (AP).—A "tide of toys" started across the Atlantic today from America's children to Europe's toyless youngsters.

The 900,000 toys loaded aboard the S. S. American Defender are headed for Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

There the 142 tons of playthings will be turned over to CARE, overseas relief agency, for distribution in Austria, France, Germany, Italy, Greece, Norway, Poland, Yugoslavia, the Netherlands, Scotland, Denmark and Ireland.

The campaign snowballed into reality after the American Legion got behind an idea broached by news columnist Drew Pearson.

George N. Craig, national commander of the Legion, said: "This is only the start—the Legion will deliver more than three million toys to Europe before this is over."

Scout Official to Speak

Dr. Arthur A. Schuck, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, will address the regular luncheon of the Rotary Club at 12:15 today in the Mayflower Hotel. Dr. Schuck will speak on "America's Youth."

Red Chinese Craft Attacked

Taipei, Formosa, Feb. 7 (U.P.)—Chinese Nationalist naval patrols have broken up a big rehearsal staged by the Communists in preparation for an invasion of Hainan Island, dispatches said today.

The Nationalist patrols scattered a fleet of about 100 motorized craft which, filled with Communist regular troops, sought to cross from the Luichow peninsula on the mainland to the west coast of Hainan, the dispatches said.

Several of the Communist craft were reported sunk and one was captured.

It was believed here that had the Communists succeeded in landing their men, the Communist guerillas now fighting in the interior might have opened a big attack toward Hoihow on the north coast of the island, timed with it.

Cotton Hearings End; Bill to Be Writtten

The Senate Agriculture Committee ended its hearings yesterday on legislation designed to correct inequities under the new cotton acreage allotment act.

After the hearings the committee considered the legislation briefly in a closed session and planned to start drafting bills Thursday.

Chairman Thomas (D. Okla.) told a reporter no action was taken in the closed session.

Bluecher Here, Complains of Refugee Host

By the United Press

The State Department was told yesterday that Western Germany is getting about 30,000 refugees a month from the Soviet-managed eastern zone.

Vice Chancellor Franz Bluecher, here for a round of talks seeking more American aid for the Western Zone, said his government is having difficulty keeping the refugees under control. He said the job would be easier if Western Germany had a centralized police force.

United States officials reportedly objected to centralization which would be almost certain to raise arguments that it was a step toward militarization.

Bluecher assured American officials his Bonn governmert is eager to get Berlin back on its economic feet.

He conferred throughout the day with State Department officials, including a courtesy call on Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

After a visit to Knoxville, Tenn., to see the Tennessee Valley Authority, he will return here Wednesday for further talks. He will stop in New York on his way back to Germany next week. While in New York he may sound out prospects for loans to Germany in private financial circles.

Firm Buys Machinery Of Late New York Sun

New York, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Edwin S. Friendly, vice president of the New York Sun, Inc., announced the machinery and mechanical equipment of the Sun had been sold to Morris and Joseph Schwartz. The brothers, who are Printcraft representatives, said the Sun's equipment will be sold privately.

McCloy Indicates West Germans Will Bow To Stern Rebuke, Look to Home Front

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 7 (AP).—United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy indicated today the west German government, smarting under the heaviest American criticism since the war, is ready to pay atention to its domestic knitting.

McCloy had a three-hour conference, described as friendly but somewhat strained, with west German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. He hinted he had received assurance the government would try to solve its economic and unemployment problems instead of pressing a propaganda campaign on foreign affairs.

In a speech at Stuttgart yesterday, McCloy rebuked German officials and told the Germans bluntly that the United States intends to keep a close grip on German political affairs. He emphasized this to Adenauer.

The 74-year-old Premier brushed off German newsmen after the conference. Asked if the meeting was carried on in a friendly manner, Adenauer snapped:

"You saw how he walked to the door with me and how we shook hands, didn't you?"

McCloy said he and Adenauer discussed proposals for getting more foreign investments into Germany, how to cope with unemployment, the Berlin situation and other problems.

Adenauer's cabinet met in Bonn to consider unemployment, reported to have soared to a postwar peak of 1,900,000. This was an increase of 342,000 over the previous month.

Adenauer handed McCloy west Germany's ratification of an agreement with the Economic Cooperation Administration binding the nation to help achieve "through a joint recovery program, economic conditions in Europe essential to a lasting peace." It was signed by President Theodor Heuss February 3.

McCloy talked with both Adenauer and Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, United States commander in Berlin, on Russia's recent slowing down of truck traffic between west Germany and Berlin.

The Soviet slowdown at the Helmstedt checkpoint, ended Saturday. Soviet guards continued to pass traffic at a normal rate there tonight. There was no backlog of trucks on either side of the boundary.

"The first encouraging sign we have seen in three weeks" was the way one American official described the traffic flow.

McCloy said Adenauer was reluctant to talk about the Stuttgart speech, but "he was very disturbed about it, very upset."

Mrs. Roosevelt to Start TV Series

New York, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will begin a weekly television show Sunday over the NBC network, it was announced today.

NBC said the new half hour show (4-4:30 p. m., EST), titled "Today With Mrs. Roosevelt," will be televised like an informal tea at which prominent guests will discuss with the former First Lady major problems of the day.

On Mrs. Roosevelt's opening show, Dr. Albert Einstein will give his views on the hydrogen bomb. Other guests who will discuss atomic problems include David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission; Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the joint congressional Atomic Energy Committee and Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, noted atomic scientist.

New Bidault Cabinet Gets Assembly Nod

Paris (Wednesday), Feb. 8 (AP).—The French National Assembly gave a vote of approval early today to Premier Georges Bidault's remodeled Cabinet. At the same time it indicated the new government has little popularity.

The vote was 225 to 185. The Socialists, De Gaullists, and right-wing independents abstained.

Earlier, Socialists had refused to join the Communists against the Premier. If they had, he would have had to resign.

If they had accepted, the Premier would have to resign.

Bidault presented his remodeled Cabinet to the Assembly in a session that broke down into political haggling. He asked the Assembly to extend its confidence to his new government, which includes only two of the three major political parties of the centrist coalition.

The Moderate Radical Socialists and Bidault's Catholic Popular Republican Movement accepted ministries. The Socialists are left out by their own choice.

The Socialists indicated they will continue to support Bidault in Parliament, but will not share cabinet responsibilities.

Bidault told the assembly the policies of the remade government would be the same as that of his old combination. He obliquely asked Socialist support, saying "nothing in the government's program would appear to justify a parliamentary isolation which, from all evidence, would have serious consequences."

Meantime the Cabinet ordered payment of a 3000 francs bonus (about $8.50) to all industrial workers earning 14,000 francs or less.

Kravchenko Aided

Sister Kenny Is Voted Open Door to U. S.

The House yesterday passed and sent to President Truman a bill that would give Sister Elizabeth Kenny the unprecedented privilege of entering and leaving this country at will, without the usual passport or immigration papers.

A member of the House Judiciary Committee staff described the bill as the broadest in its individual application of any immigration measure ever passed by Congress. Sister Kenny is an Australian.

Under its terms, the famed exponent of a treatment for infantile paralysis could enter the United States, work here, and leave whenever she chose.

At the same time, Congress voted to let Viktor A. Kravchenko, onetime Soviet Communist official and author of "I Chose Freedom," remain in the United States permanently.

House approval sent to President Truman a bill, already passed by the Senate, waiving immigration requirements for Kravchenko.

Kravchenko Suit Award Cut to Almost Nothing

Paris, Feb. 7 (AP).—Viktor Kravchenko, Russian-born author of the anti-Soviet book, "I Chose Freedom," was awarded three francs (about three-fourths of a cent) today as damages in the libel suit he won against a pro-Communist magazine, Les Lettres Francaises.

Kravchenko won the suit last April, and writers Claude Morgan and Andre Wurmser were fined 5000 francs each. Kravchenko was awarded 150,000 francs ($420) damages.

An appeals court upheld the fine, but said Kravchenko had been compensated by the publicity his book got from the trial. The magazine had charged that Kravchenko didn't write the book.

Travel Aids World Trade, AAA Unit Told

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) suggested yesterday that Europe's dollar scarcity problem would be solved "if we let a million American wives loose in Europe."

The Senator was boosting international travel as "the least painful" and the most important single way to restore a balance of trade with other countries.

He also told an American Automobile Association luncheon discussion that "labor" and the "great American middle income group" have been virtually untapped in the international travel market.

Senator Brewster said the gap of two or three billion dollars in the balance of trade with Europe could be closed in large measure by American travel, which he described as "always susceptible to indefinite expansion."

The luncheon discussion on international travel was sponsored by the women's safety committee and the District of Columbia advisory board of the AAA at the Hotel Mayflower.

Mrs. Ruth Shipley, chief of the passport division of the State Department, another speaker, said her division is trying to make it easier to obtain passports and other documents for travel.

Russell E. Singer, AAA executive vice president, and William L. Lewis, AAA assistant director of international travel, told of the association's efforts to encourage and facilitate foreign travel.

Second Admits Polish Charge Of Espionage

Stettin, Poland, Feb. 7 (AP).—The second Frenchman in Poland's spy trial pleaded guilty today and declared French intelligence chiefs in Poland used blackmail to recruit their agents.

The defendant, Gaston Drouet, told a military court here that when he tried to get out of the alleged spy ring, the French vice consul at Gdansk, Rene Bardet, told him he "had gone too far."

Drouet is being tried with another Frenchman, former consular secretary Andre Robineau, and four Poles. Robineau pleaded guilty of espionage yesterday.

Drouet told the court almost all members of the French diplomatic service in Poland were engaged in intelligence.

Among those he named were the late Gen. Georges Teyssier, a former military attache whom he declared to have been chief of all espionage in Poland.

In pleading guilty, Drouet said he regretted his action. He said Bardet had promised him a visa for his girl friend to induce him to join the ring.

Wende Quits Tito; Last Iron Curtain Envoy

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Polish Ambassador Jan Karol Wende left Belgrade last weekend to complete the diplomatic embargo imposed on Yugoslavia by the Cominform, it was announced today.

There now are no chiefs of mission—ambassadors or ministers—in Belgrade from the seven East European Communist countries that two years ago were Premier Marshal Tito's closest allies.

Only a few junior diplomatic and service attaches, living in ever-greater isolation, remain to carry out the business of the seven embassies and legations.

The Polish Ambassador, who was the dean of the diplomatic corps, used the diplomatic phrase "un court sejour"—a short stay—to describe his visit to Poland.

However, at the Polish embassy it was reported that Wende is shipping his personal effects home and that although he may return to Belgrade briefly he definitely will not remain here.

Windsors Rumored Planning Britain Home

London, Feb. 7 (U.P.).—A gossip columnist for The Evening Star said today the Duke of Windsor, after 13 years of virtual exile, intended to establish a permanent home in Britain this year for himself and his Duchess.

Buckingham Palace and other royal sources declined to comment.

The columnist reported the Duke would set up a permanent home in Britain "before the end of 1950."

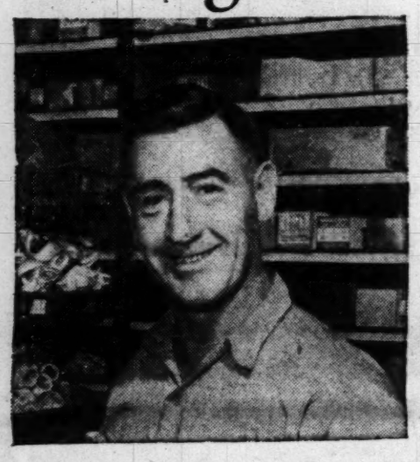
"I work for wages..."



"I work for myself..."

BOTH have made investment in income-producing common stocks a part of their families' financial programs

"I've always had the habit of thrift, and saving something ahead for future use. To make my money produce for me, I invest it instead of hiding it in the sugar bowl.

"I look at a company carefully before I invest any of my dollars in its stock. Dividend payments have to be good before I get interested.

"Maybe you're surprised to find that anyone who works for wages, as I do, is a stockholder in American companies. Personally, I think it's a mighty good thing. I know something about industrial companies, simply because I work for one of them. In my lifetime, I've seen U. S. business grow and expand and develop many new things. I believe in its future. That's why I've got a stockholder's stake in it right now."

Emil F. Geiger
PARLIN, N. J.

"A man who is in business for himself, as I am, has to stand on his own two feet—without benefit of social security or unemployment insurance. And when he has four wonderful youngsters to bring up and educate as well as he possibly can, his personal financial program takes on an importance second to nothing else.

"Years ago, my wife and I decided to start a 'fund for the future.' We have always put aside every dollar beyond our emergency reserves that we could spare. We invest these dollars regularly where they will work most profitably for us . . . a good part of them in dividend-paying stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. This year our stocks are bringing us a return of better than 6%, on the average."

Investment Facts . . . and your income

A new edition of the booklet "Investment Facts About Common Stocks and Cash Dividends" shows the following average cash yield of all dividend-paying common stocks on the New York Stock Exchange for each year since 1940, based on year-end prices.

1940	1941	1942	1943	1944	1945	1946	1947	1948	1949
6.1%	9.3%	7.8%	6.1%	5.0%	3.5%	4.8%	6.3%	7.8%	7.0%

Of interest to investors is a new feature of this edition—a simple, statistical composite of 281 stocks which have paid cash dividends every year for 20 to 102 years. This composite is based on number of years of sustained dividend payment, amount of payment in 1949, market price and rate of return. This information is tabulated for each of the stocks comprising the composite. The booklet may be obtained locally at Member Firms' offices or by writing to the New York Stock Exchange.

Yields change as market prices and dividends change. Informed investors keep this in mind, as they do the many other factors that affect investment values. Current yields and other factual information needed in evaluating any security may be obtained at offices of Member Firms of the Exchange.

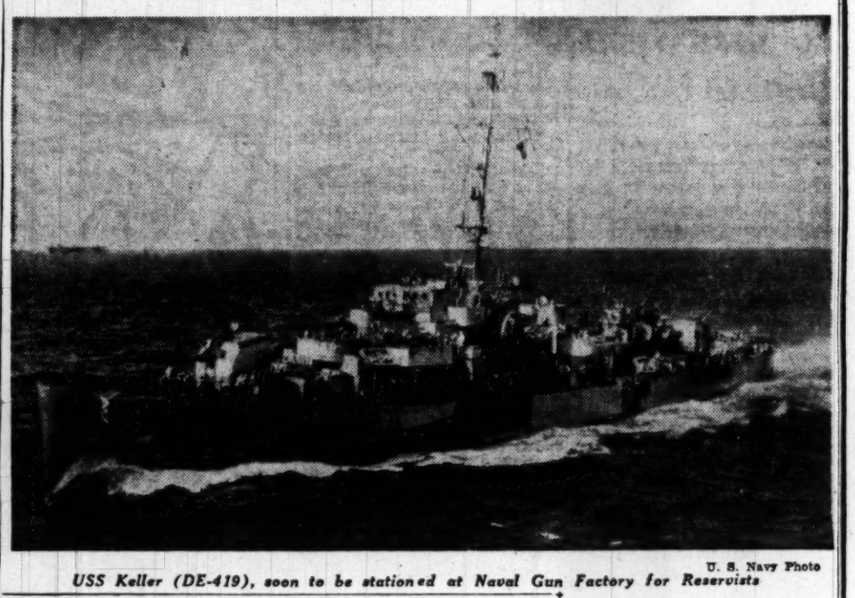
D. C. Naval Reservists Assigned Cruise Ship; To Sail 1350-Ton Keller From Seattle



U. S. Navy Photo
USS Keller (DE-419), soon to be stationed at Naval Gun Factory for Reservists

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A 1350-ton hero of the Pacific war—the destroyer escort USS Robert F. Keller—has been assigned to the District of Columbia naval reservists as their operational training ship.

The Navy announced last night that the vanguard of a local reservist contingent has arrived on the West Coast to sail the craft from Seattle to Washington via the Panama Canal. The ship is due to arrive March 14.

Commissioned at Houston, Tex., in June, 1944, the Keller served with famed Task Force 38, taking part in the Iwo Jima campaign, and operating with carriers, rescued seven shot-down pilots in 11 months. Since January, 1946, she has been assigned to the Seattle naval base for reserve training.

Two officers and 11 men were flown from Washington to Moffett Field Monday on the Navy transport plane Constitution, reaching Seattle yesterday. Another group under Comdr. Gilbert L. Rodier, USNR, 5904 Ryland dr., Bethesda, will fly out Friday in a Washington Naval Air Reserve transport, followed by the rest of the crew Sunday.

Commander Rodier will command the ship on her journey East. Officials pointed out the assignment will afford the local reserves an unusual opportunity to test their readiness for mobilization.

The Keller will leave Seattle February 15 and stop at San Diego, Calif.; Balboa and Cristobal, Panama Canal Zone, and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Mo Quits Dock; Officers on Trial

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—The battleship Missouri came out of drydock today as her commanding officer, navigator and operations officer sat as defendants before a naval court of inquiry.

Capt. Brown

Workers have repaired bottom damage inflicted on the big Mo when she ran aground in Chesapeake Bay January 17. She will sail Wednesday for two-day post-repair sea trials.

He is Capt. H. P. Smith, will replace Capt. William D. Brown as skipper, Atlantic Fleet headquarters announced, "at least until legal proceedings are completed." Smith had preceded Brown as skipper.

"It is fair and proper," fleet headquarters said, "that the commanding officer, navigator and other officers defending themselves in the present court of inquiry should not have the additional burden of the responsibility of the ship during the present legal proceedings . . ."

Returning to Norfolk Thursday, the Missouri will reload and sail early next week to resume the refresher training cruise to Guantanamo, Cuba, which was interrupted by her grounding.

In Washington today the House Armed Services Committee said it will ask Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, to testify whether he thinks the Missouri, the Nation's only active battlewagon, should be placed in mothballs.

The naval court of inquiry sat at the Norfolk naval base, some 10 miles from the dry dock.

Captain Brown and the ship's navigator, Lieut. Comdr. Frank G. Morris, were named defendants at the court's opening session last Friday. Today the court named as the third defendant the Missouri's operations officer, Comdr. John R. Millett. He had been advised yesterday to retain counsel.

Millett's status was changed to that of a defendant after he testified he had confused shallow water buoys for deep water buoys shortly before the battleship ran aground.

Millett said that as the ship approached a secret electronic recording range beside the main channel he told Captain Brown he thought two spar buoys marking a small vessel channel in the back river "may mark" the electronic range.

He did not recommend that Brown steer for the spar buoys, however, Millett testified.

The spar buoys are several hundred yards north of the range buoys.

The operations officer testified also he thought five buoys marked the range but learned later there were only two.

After the Missouri had passed to the left and inshore of the two range buoys the navigator told Brown the ship should be turned to the right, Millett testified. He said Brown told him the navigator "does not know where he is" and then ordered Millett to "go find out."

Millett said he went into the charthouse but moments later the ship grounded. He said he doubts the ship could have avoided grounding if she had been turned right when Morris recommended such action, because even when the engines are at full speed astern "she still has a run of about 300 yards forward."

Scrapping of Lane Tax Relief Urged

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—Governor Lane's proposal to give income tax relief to most Marylanders ran into some unexpected trouble in the Senate today.

Some Senators suggested that his plan could be scrapped and the sales tax act be modified instead.

By raising exemptions for dependents, cutting the income tax bills of those who have small investments and doubling the exemptions of those 65 and older, the administration figures the total savings to taxpayers would be about $1,250,000.

Identical bills in the House and Senate would exempt food eaten in restaurants from the 2 percent sales tax. That would save Marylanders about $3,500,000 a year—almost three times as much as the suggested income tax cuts.

Senate Minority Leader Kimble (R., Allegany) sponsored the latest sales tax exemption measure. He said that nearly everyone in the State would benefit.

An expected House battle over the newly-acquired power of its rules committee to screen all legislation at a 30-day session fizzled out.

Delegates Buffington and Tawney (D., Balto. 3d) withdrew their motion to strip the committee of its control over bills just before it was to have come up for a vote.

bills involving general public welfare.

Specifically, the bill would call for two meetings a week of the commissioners, as compared with one now held.

Some Points Not New

It calls for a chairman of the board of commissioners as a full-time job at $7500 a year. He is to have "administrative supervision of all deparements and employes of the county government" subject to direction of review of the board. At present, no county commissioner devotes full time to the job. Other members of the five-man board of commissioners would receive $3600 per year.

Although most of the powers assigned to the county commissioners under terms of Sothoron's bill are not new, the bill does give particulars on the exercise of those powers. Here are the broad powers it would exercise, exclusive of two dealing purely with administrative organization:

1. Establish departments of the county government, and prescribe their functions.

2. Provide for appointment and removal of all county officers and employes, except those to be appointed or elected under constitutional or public law terms, and fix their salaries.

Other Powers

3. Prescribe the duties, powers and functions of any officer, employe or board appointed by it or under its supervision.

4. Establish a merit system in connection with the appointment of all county officers or employes it elects.

5. Prescribe rules and regulations for procurement of materials, supplies and public work.

6. "Acquire by purchase, condemnation or lease, and dispose of by sale or lease, real estate for any public purpose, and erect buildings thereon for the benefit of the county."

7. Provide for a county police force.

8. Fix charges for permits issued by the board.

9. Adopt a system of budgetary control and audit of all county funds.

Contraceptive Dispenser Ban Sought

Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7—A bill to ban the sale of contraceptives through slot machines in Maryland rest rooms was introduced in the Maryland General Assembly today by Prince Georges Delegate George G. McLeish.

McLeish said the bill was not anti-contraceptive, but was designed to curb the sale of the prophylactics except in regular pharmaceutical practice.

He said he had received a large protest from county constituents about the practice, which he understood is "fairly general" in Prince Georges County. The bill itself would be Statewide in application.

One of these letters, McLeish said, came from the Rev. W. Keith Custis, of the Riverdale Presbyterian Church, who wrote:

"It is one thing to have contraceptives for sale where medical supplies are normally purchased and an entirely different matter to have them available in machines.

"They obviously become available without embarrassment to young people. Their presence is suggestive of widespread abandonment of moral standards and is an encouragement to laxity of morals.

Sweeping Revision of Road Laws Asked in Montgomery

A sweeping revision of Montgomery County road laws was proposed yesterday by the county council, to require subdividers to construct sidewalks, curbs, gutters and storm drainage and erect street signs, on all new roads.

The proposed ordinance will be presented at a public hearing March 11 at 9 a. m., in the Rockville Courthouse.

A significant feature of the new ordinance is the requirement that subdividers post performance bonds to insure completion of the demanded facilities.

The ordinance sets up higher standards of construction, defines assessment policies for both new roads and reconstruction, and classifies roads by type of use.

Builders who construct or grade roads without a permit would be subject to a fine of not more than $100 or a jail sentence up to six months for each day's violation.

The council also enacted a dog-vaccination ordinance requiring that unleashed animals must be given rabies shots at annual health department clinics. Owners of animals would be liable to $50 fines.

Public hearings were also announced for two other proposed ordinances at 7:30 p. m., March 16, at the courthouse.

These ordinances would establish "exact standards" for private educational institutions and would modify zoning regulations with respect to establishment of private schools.

Flower Show Slated Here March 23-29

Washington's National Guard Armory will be transformed into a 2-acre flower garden for the twenty-sixth national flower and garden show March 23 through 29.

Plans for the show, sponsored by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulture, were announced yesterday at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Greater Washington garden club officials and florists attended the meeting.

During the week-long exhibition, prizes totaling $25,000 will be awarded.

Robert Roland, executive secretary of the society and manager of the show, said profits from the show will be used for fellowships and scholarships for research in horticultural work.

Florist Granville Gude of Washington heads the local committee making arrangements for the show.

Cadillac

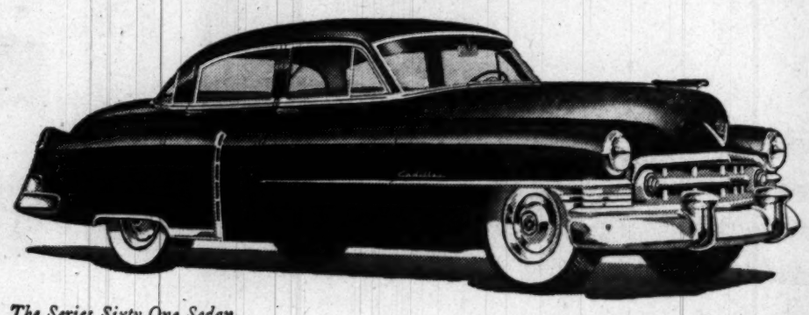
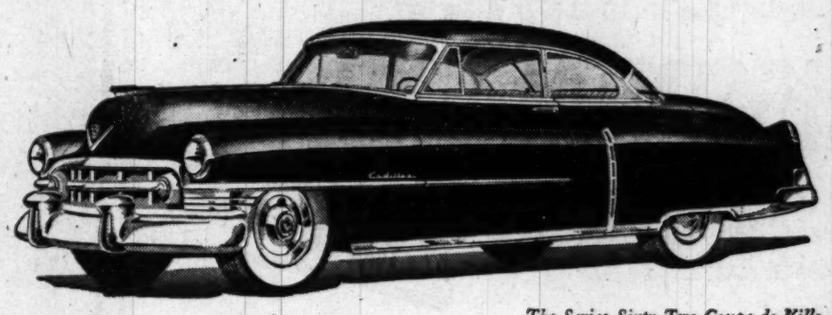
The Series Sixty Special Sedan

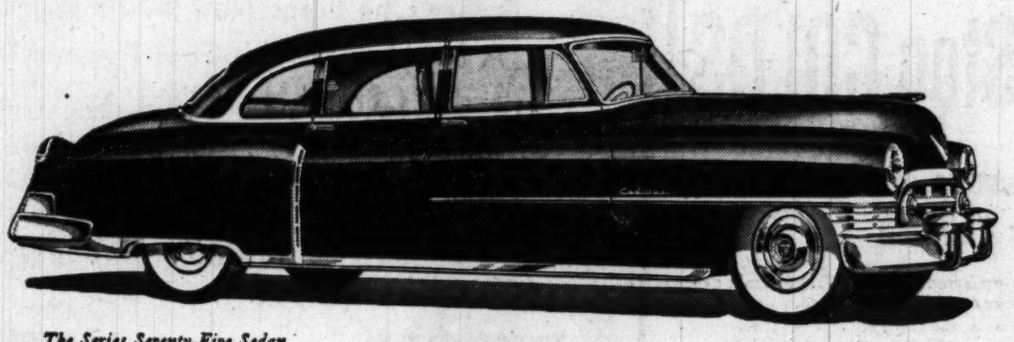
...All Dramatically Restyled...and Powered by Cadillac's Sensational New Engine!



The Series Sixty-One Sedan



The Series Sixty-Two Coupe de Ville



The Series Seventy-Five Sedan

TODAY, we are presenting, for your consideration, the finest, most beautiful motor cars we have ever been privileged to announce.

They are the new Cadillacs for 1950—and we want you to come and see them.

We not only want you to see them—but we think you should see them. For to see and inspect these wonderful creations will make you a sharper judge of all cars—and increase your motor-car wisdom in every respect.

So arrange to see them—regardless of the price class from which you expect your next car to come.

There are four entirely new series of cars—all with wholly new bodies, and all completely restyled. We think you'll agree that nothing so sleek and dynamic and beautiful has ever been seen on the world's streets and highways. They are arrestingly and breath-takingly gorgeous—and all are distinctively Cadillac.

And not only are they advanced in beauty—but their performance is finer in every way.

Cadillac's great new high-compression engine is even smoother; it is actually quicker in acceleration; and it runs so quietly that only the indicators reveal when it is in action. It is simply wonderful to drive.

And—difficult as this will be for owners of 1949 Cadillacs to believe—the 1950 cars are even more economical to operate. Gasoline mileage really approaches that of the smaller, lowest-priced cars. It is no less than amazing that cars so big and luxurious should run so far on a gallon of gasoline.

Comfort and handling ease are also remarkably advanced. There is far finer road balance and over-all steadiness at all driving speeds. Steering is softer and more positive. Brakes are more efficient and longer-lived. The over-all satisfaction of driving—from every standpoint—is simply "out of this world."

Truly, here are cars so fine and beautiful and luxurious that they deserve your personal consideration.

Make your plans now to see them . . . and bring your family and friends. You will be cordially welcome at any time.

Story of $15,000 Offer to Kill Reuther Hit by Bolton Defense

Detroit, Feb. 7 (AP).—The defense launched a bitter counterattack today against a convict's story that Carl Bolton offered him $15,000 to "rub out" Walter Reuther.

In an acrid cross-examination, Defense Attorney Joseph Louisell drew from John Kaliszewski, a 46-year-old hoodlum, an admission that he had led a career of stealing and lying.

Kaliszewski is one of the State's star witnesses in its trial of Bolton on a charge of trying to kill Reuther, president of the CIO-United Auto Workers.

He has already testified that Bolton tried to hire him to assassinate the red-headed union leader, whose right arm was shattered by a shotgun blast through a window of his home April 20, 1948.

Louisell's counterattack on the testimony gave the eight-day-old trial its most heated moments.

Kaliszewski admitted living under a series of aliases, serving from 1920 to 1946 in prison with only a one-year interruption, living with his brother's wife and lying to parole officials.

Two years after his parole in 1946 he was arrested and convicted of taking part in a Pontiac store robbery with Bolton.

Still unsentenced, he faces a possible life term. It was at this that Louisell aimed his sharpest darts.

Speaking of Kaliszewski's time in jail after his latest arrest, the defense attorney asked:

"The future didn't look very bright then, did it?"

"It still doesn't" Kaliszewski replied.

"So you sat down and tried to figure out a solution," Louisell countered.

"It wouldn't say a solution," the witness replied.

Louisell then referred to Kaliszewski's action in calling in a State police lieutenant and telling him the story that led to Bolton's arrest.

"In view of all this," the defense attorney asked, "can you still say you have not been promised any consideration for your story?"

"I can," replied Kaliszewski.

Coal Mine Seizure Bill Approved

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7.—The administration bill to permit Gov. John S. Battle to seize Virginia coal mines for operation by the State was reported by a House committee, 14-0, today.

As the committee on general laws considered the measure in executive session, Governor Battle told reporters he had called a meeting for Thursday of sheriffs and Commonwealth's attorneys from the seven mining counties in southwest Virginia, "to discuss the situation and be prepared for any possible emergency."

He said he felt it is "entirely possible that the problem may be worked out on a national level," with invocation of the Taft-Hartley Act by President Truman.

15,000 Miners Out

About 15,000 union miners in Virginia are out of the pits on full-scale strike for at least a week. An estimated 4000 miners, mostly at strip locations served by truck, were on a five-day week today.

The mine seizure bill, asked by Battle in his inaugural address last month, would give statutory authority to powers now considered "inherent" in the executive branch of the Government.

The bill, proposed by Delegate John B. Boatwright, of Buckingham, permits seizure of Virginia mines by the governor when there is a "substantial interruption or a substantial threat of interruption" of the flow of coal from the pits.

Outlines Bill

At a public hearing before Senate and House general laws committees, Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., outlined major points of the bill.

Officials of the United Mine Workers and other labor unions filed a statement with the committee that they were "unalterably opposed to the bill."

Phone Strike Is Delayed For 16 Days

The CIO Communication Workers of America yesterday put off to February 24 their strike deadline, set for 6 a. m. today.

The Nation-wide walkout of 100,000 phone workers was deferred 16 days at the request of Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, who urged that the union's divisions and the Bell System subsidiaries seek to resolve their contract disputes through intensified collective bargaining.

Joseph Beirne, CWA president, after polling the union's executive board on the Ching request, wired acceptance yesterday morning. Beirne said:

"Mr. Ching, through his personal intervention and his grave concern for the interests of the public, may be successful in getting the Bell System to do some real collective bargaining.

"We, too, have grave concern for the interests of the public. We think we have demonstrated that in these months of fruitless bargaining. We want to avoid a strike.

In New York, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent company of the Bell System, yesterday issued the following statement:

"We are glad to hear that there will be no strike tomorrow.

In Washington, spokesmen for the 500 CWA workers with Western Electric, a Bell subsidiary, said that they had been ready, signs and all, to throw pickets around every Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. building here and in nearby Maryland.

Most of C&P's employes belong to Division 36 or Division 50 of the Communication Workers. These two locals yesterday held a series of joint quarterly membership meetings at Turner's Arena, starting at 8:30 a. m., and running into the night. Union leaders said they outlined local and national bargaining progress to their rank and file.

Divisions 36 and 50 each held their fourth bargaining sessions with C&P representatives on a wage reopener clause of their work contract. Mrs. Janet Palmer of Division 50 said a "new proposal" was given to the company for consideration.

of coal for its locomotives; Baltimore & Ohio took over 30 hoppercars of fuel. Other lines were reported to be planning similar coal seizures.

The rails, too, were cutting down train service because of the low coal stocks; and many were furloughing employes because of the severe drop in coal hauling.

Chesapeake & Ohio announced it had laid off 2166 transportation department employes and would furlough 1080 mechanical department men Friday. Norfolk & Western ordered 500 shop employes to be laid off.

As a result of the coal shortage, it is estimated that 20,000 employes of railroads and steel plants—six of which had announced a reduction in operation—have been furloughed around the country.

At Cannonsburg, Pa., a striking coal miner proposed yesterday that John L. Lewis and his UMW lieutenants give up one pay check to buy food for the hungry miners.

Roman Rybarski, 55, father of seven, who works at the Lindley Mine of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., said that such an act "could buy us miners a lot of bread."

Asked if he thought the miners would return to work in obedience to a Taft-Hartley court injunction, Rybarski—who has mined coal for 44 years—said:

"Damn the Taft-Hartley Law. It has only angered the men more. Force never dug coal in my experience and now the men won't obey until they get a contract."

Scout Birthday

This week the Boy Scouts of America are celebrating their fortieth anniversary, an occasion to be commemorated in Washington by a dinner at the National Press Club Wednesday night. Nearly 20 percent of the American male population has been exposed to Scouting during those 40 years, and the present organization numbers more than 2,300,000 members and adult leaders, including some 19,000 in the Washington area. The influence of Scouting has been much more than the negative prevention of juvenile delinquency, or the abstract teaching of good citizenship, important as that is. Boy Scouts learn to work together, to accept responsibility, to obey the discipline of the group. They acquire useful knowledge and crafts, and a love of the outdoors that many of them will keep all their lives. Most of all, they have fun doing all this. It must be a satisfying experience for parents and committeemen to work with young enthusiasts, and we suspect that on this anniversary the "adult leaders" will be as proud as the Boy Scouts themselves.

German Policy

Clearer and clearer comes the voice of the State Department in defining American diplomacy in particular areas in disturbance. The latest example is the major policy statement on Germany contained in High Commissioner McCloy's speech at Stuttgart. Three years ago Secretary Byrnes, taking time out from the peace parley in Paris, appeared in the same city and nailed the whispering campaign emanating from Moscow that America was about to quit Germany and Europe. This assurance has been justified by events, notably by the airlift in Berlin. Mr. McCloy renewed the pledge of Western protection while the Germans are in the process of reconstructing their life and economic activity. Any further harassment from Russia will be met unflinchingly.

What the United States expects is that within the framework of this assurance the Germans will concentrate on the task of reconstruction. There was a bluntness in Mr. McCloy's reminder of this American expectation. But the need had been demonstrated by the revisionism toward the origins of the war that has been noted in German comment. Many Germans nowadays are busy explaining the war in terms of their own exculpation; they are blaming everybody but themselves for the war and its aftermath; they are shadow-boxing with collective guilt. In this respect the difference between Germany and Japan is striking. As Mr. McCloy said, "No one, least of all the people of the United States, is charging all Germans with the responsibility for Hitler's crimes." Those Germans who have visited the United States are perfectly aware of the American attitude. The solitary idea in America in this respect is to let bygones be bygones and help the Germans to take their place again as members of the European community. It is discouraging that, knowing this, the German parties, all the way from the non-Communist Left to the extreme Right, are so stridently nationalist—and, as in the case of the Schuman visit to Germany, offensive. A little more self-scrutiny and a reorientation of concept would be more becoming.

This is not to say that policy toward Germany after the discovery of Russian noncooperation is not in part responsible for German introversion. Some things had to be done, such as dismantlement and war crimes trials, but they had to be done quickly, and weren't. The Germans have never yet been reminded of the depth and the extent of their own resistance movement. Most of the evidence has been lost, most of the heroes killed. Would that Mr. McCloy, in referring to the "amazing docility and acquiescence" to Nazi outrages, had mentioned this resistance! He could have gone further and handed over to the Amerika Haus, the opening of which was the occasion of this speech, a collection of memorials to this brave and libertarian Germany—the men who would have been today's leaders. But the main contribution which the occupying powers made to German introversion was the setting up of the Bonn government. This made us look like partitionists and divisionists, it aided the nationalists and chauvinists, it turned West German eyes to the East, instead of to the West.

At least there should have been a redoubled effort to bring the Germans into the European community. The lag in this respect has been inexcusable. What Mr. McCloy has to say about the need for moving to a new plane of discussion is as applicable to other peoples as to the German people. He says that the leading principle of our policy is to see a free German people "integrated into a free Europe," and asks them to take "an increasingly active part themselves in the political and economic organization of Europe." This alternative may not be available much longer.

Legion Blast

The American Legion's youthful national commander, George N. Craig, has attacked the Hoover Commission recommendations on veterans' affairs with a sound and fury worthy of his predecessors. He has proved himself a redoubtable spokesman for veterans as a special interest group. What he has failed to do—as so many of his predecessors failed before him—is to prove himself a spokesman for veterans as responsible members of the national community employing their group strength for the advancement of national interests.

"I indict the authors and proponents of these suggested changes," Mr. Craig told a convention of American Legion service officers Monday night, "as men without experience in the matter of veterans' affairs . . . I regret to say the campaign conducted by the Citizens Committee (for the Hoover Report) has attempted to bring into disrepute the veteran." We think these charges fall by their own extravagance. Former President Herbert Hoover, who recommended establishment of the Veterans' Administration, is not without experience in veterans' affairs. Neither is Col. Franklin D'Olier, who served as chairman of the veterans' affairs task force for the Hoover Commission and who used to occupy Mr. Craig's position as national commander of the American Legion. The survey teams that worked under Colonel D'Olier were composed almost entirely of veterans. None of these men is an enemy of the veteran, and nobody is trying to bring the veteran into disrepute.

They thought of veterans not as men whose war service had taken them out of the American community but as men who are a vital part of the community. They felt that the whole community, and the veterans themselves, could be better served by an integration of governmental functions. They believed that veterans could get better medical care, for example, if the Government's medical program were unified and streamlined instead of being wastefully divided as at present with one system for veterans and another system for nonveterans. Unification would mean an over-all expansion of medical activities resulting in more ample facilities for veterans than are now available. The same logic applies to the handling of construction and housing services for veterans. Unification means economy and increased efficiency.

In the long run, the real enemy of the veteran may prove to be the leader who wants to keep him out of the main stream of American life, who wants to isolate him and make him a member not of the whole community but of a manipulable special interest group. The essential interest of veterans as of nonveterans is in a soundly organized and effective Federal Government.

Navy Lingo

Candor obliges us to say that we do not perceive much likelihood of success for the effort to purge the vocabularies of naval personnel of all flippant and irrelevant nomenclature. The best that can be hoped for is that some of the terms now in vogue in informal conversation to designate various categories of persons will be replaced by a new and more imaginative set. The truth is that some of the terms to which the Navy Public Relations News Letter objects have been borrowed from other spheres of activity and have become a bit hackneyed through wide adoption.

"Brass hat," for example, appears to have been originally an American railroader's term for somebody of official rank and to have been derived from the traditional brass identification plate and gold piping on the caps worn by conductors and stationmasters. It was probably here in the United States that the term was picked up by Rudyard Kipling. Anyway, the Oxford English Dictionary cites an example from one of his Mulvaney stories published in 1893, a few years after his first American journey. The use of the term by Kipling in another story published in 1904 is also cited. But it was apparently not until toward the end of the Great War of 1914-18 that the term became prevalent in the British military forces. The allusion in that case was to the gold leafing on the visors of the caps of British general officers. And that, of course, accounts for its somewhat belated extension to flag officers of the American Navy.

"Airedale" was also in general American usage long before it was adopted by the Navy. It has had disparaging, approving and neutral connotations. According to the Messrs. Berrey and Van den Bark, compilers of the American Thesaurus of Slang, it has been variously used to designate a stupid person, an unattractive woman, an unshaven man, a gullible or naive person, a trustworthy person, a person without social graces, a night watchman, a seemingly respectable accomplice to crime, a theatrical extra, a waterfront bootlegger, and a girl with noticeable hair on her arms or legs. The naval usage, however, refers merely to the coloring of uniforms worn by naval aviators.

"Sea-going bellhop," as a sailor's term for a fleet marine, might have been similarly derived from the familiar brass-buttoned blue tunic, though it doubtless also refers to the use of marines as orderlies. Messrs. Berrey and Van den Bark also list "gyreen" among sailors' terms for marines, but make no effort to explain the etymology, which, we confess, quite baffles us. Possibly it was derived from a mispronunciation of "marine" by some unsophisticated and uninstructed recruit. Possibly it is an onomatopoeic reproduction of the sound of a bell by which a marine orderly was summoned to the presence of the officer upon whom he was in attendance.

Liberty Vs. Socialism

The Republicans did well to drop their foolish firing at the "welfare state," for many of their own proposals are designed "to promote the general welfare," to quote the constitutional purpose of government. For example, while damning the Brannan Plan, the Republicans come out for a "system of price supports . . . to the end that the farmer's standard of living will be in line with the contribution he makes to the national economy." Likewise they favor increased benefits and wider coverage under the old-age and survivors' insurance program and more adequate medical care through the States. The necessity of using governmental powers to advance the interests of the people is clearly recognized. The GOP spokesmen seek to draw the line only against programs which, they believe, would lead to socialism. The major domestic issue today, they say, is "liberty against socialism."

This antithesis, it seems to us, falls short of a refined definition of the major issue of our times. Socialism has become an impostor word that has vastly different meanings for different groups. Liberty vs. regimentation comes closer to defining the difference in party programs that the Republicans wish to emphasize. Actually they have not hit upon any catch phrase that adequately describes the dangers inherent in a policy which encourages vast numbers of people to lean upon the Government and which perpetuates the party in power by lavish expenditures of public funds for the benefit of powerful groups of voters. Maybe "spendocracy" is the term they are seeking. In any event, one of the best sections of the statement is the one demanding a curtailment of Government spending, though God knows how long this section can stand up in the face of the growing world crisis.

The new Republican statement of policy is something considerably less than an inspired document. Some of the more forward-looking Republicans are dissatisfied with the statement because of its paucity of constructive ideas. Our history suggests that liberty is best safeguarded not only by eternal vigilance but also when change is coupled with conservatism. Charles Evans Hughes used to say, when he was Governor of New York in the early part of the century, that only a progressive society can remain stable. We suspect that a vast number of citizens who are disturbed by the recklessness of the Truman Administration are not yet convinced that the Republicans have found the formula for satisfying what Holmes called the "felt necessities of the times" within a framework of both liberty and economic progress.

Aunty Knows Best

Senator McMahon pleads for a "Nationwide discussion" on the way to join the H-bomb decision to constructive activity in the minds of men, and Senator Tydings calls attention to the public lack of awareness of the world crisis. Yet the President deprecates discussion on the H-bomb, and the lip-tightening order to the Government departments seems to have been reaffirmed. All the more reason why the President should consider the compromise of a commission or kitchen cabinet to inspire understanding—the only basis for informed discussion—of what the H-bomb means and the obligations that it imposes. It is not enough to talk comfortingly, as Secretary Johnson did in his Press Club speech of Thursday night, about the preparedness of the national defense. Neither complacency nor resting the American case upon the H-bomb is the answer to the question-asking and worried public.

Silk threads, to paraphrase Ferrero, are what keep this free Nation together, not iron fetters. But there is a fixed point at which they are tied together, and that is a state of mutual confidence. Maintenance of that confidence is the business of leadership in a society resting on representative government. But leadership in a democracy is not merely the business of making decisions but also the business of explaining decisions—or at least awesome ones such as the H-bomb decision—so that they seem responsible. That is the way to evoke confidence. Show confidence and you will get it. Withhold it, and distrust enters, and with it fear. Fear! That is the diabolical force that releases the evil in human nature, and will inevitably be produced unless there is less supersecrecy and more responsibility in high places toward the people. The contrast between the "Aunty Knows Best" refusal even to discuss the broad lines of policy with the public and the revealed hospitality to spies in atom bomb projects points up the need for more confidence. In pursuit of openness, toll has hitherto been laid on the Nation's wisdom—in developing an A-bomb policy (through the Acheson-Lilienthal Committee), in initiating recovery and reconstruction (through the Harriman Committee) and in promoting a policy in China (through the advisory committee to the State Department). Why not now?

McMahon Vs. Johnson

The Washington Post editorialized on page 1 without realizing it, on February 3, when it placed side by side Secretary Johnson's "lick hell out of Joe Stalin" story and that of Senator McMahon's speech calling for a "moral crusade for peace."

Perhaps it was not The Post's intent, but your layout made ridiculous the Defense Secretary's immoral boasting, when compared to Mr. McMahon's stimulating words. The comparison was as effective to the reader of the two stories as would have been a direct editorial on the point.

The Senator's plan is the first real light yet to appear in a darkness made even blacker by the type of irresponsible talk that the Secretary of Defense uttered. If we are to have peace and to find mutual understanding with other nations, the leadership will come from McMahon-like men. D. H.

Washington.

Since it is admitted by all responsible authorities that Russia will not be too far behind us in the manufacture of her own hydrogen bomb, how can a responsible statesman, one who holds so crucial a position as Secretary Johnson, have the infinite bad taste, not to mention gall, to utter such irresponsible and provocative statements? Will not this lend more credence to the Soviet charge of American warmongering than the production of a thousand hydrogen bombs? Is this the technique of peace-making?

"Closed Door"

If your February 3 editorial, "Closed Door," is not naive it is certainly disingenuous. Marx taught that social change flourishes in an environment of upheaval and violence. Further, it was the business of Marxists to induce these fertile conditions.

Experience in central Europe has shown that the Social Democrats are the natural and willing collaborators of the Russian Marxists. For example, Arpad Szakasits, long-time leader of the Hungarian Social Democratic Party, as titular President of the Peoples' Republic is the sedulous puppet af Matyas Rakosi, the Red gauleiter.

Your implied eagerness to admit such a character as Pietro Nenni to the United States indicates that you have forgotten—or else condone—his adherance to Togliatti in the Italian elections of 1948. Is there any reason to suppose that the Marxists whom you would welcome to our shores would pass up the opportunity to join forces with Henry Wallace, Marcantonio, William Z. Foster, Alger Hiss, Paul Robeson and their ilk?

Non-Communists who have lived in a Communist country share only one belief with the Bolsheviks: There is no middle road. MARY THIELEN.

Arlington.

Editor's note: Members of the Socialist Party are Marxists who seek a fundamental change in the economic system by peaceful means. Ever since the Bolshevists, with their doctrine of revolutionary violence, were excluded from the Second Internationale in 1918, Socialists have been bitter opponents of communism both in Europe and the United States. From Edward Bellamy to Norman Thomas, a great many Socialist Marxists whose loyalty to this country was unimpeachable have made significant contributions to American thought. Of course, there are today more versions of Marxism than Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels could count on their combined fingers and toes; and their diverse adherents, each considering himself the only true disciple, range in character, as we suggested, all the way from G. B. Shaw to Nenni. This is why we think any blanket exclusion absurd.

Telephone Wages

I read with interest and disgust an advertisement in your February 2 paper by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

It does not seem to me that the telephone company would deliberately publish wage scales to confuse or mislead the public in the controversy between it and the CIO in the current wage deliberations. However, the advertisement states that "fully experienced operators" receive a weekly wage of $59.23.

I discussed the matter with two company operators who have had 26 and 28 years service. They inform me that the highest wage an operator can get under the present wage scale for a five-day week, which is their regular work week, is $52, and that they will never be paid any more than this figure until a new wage scale is in effect, regardless of how long they work as faithful and efficient operators.

E. J. GREGORY.

Editor's Note: The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. explains that every operator must work a certain number of evenings and Sundays, so that the average pay for fully experienced operators is $59.23. This includes differentials but no overtime.

"Mobilizing Wisdom"

The February 3 editorial, "Mobilizing The Nation's Wisdom," is timely and well put. We have tried everything else. Now before it is too late let's try our one last hope—brains! Let's give brains a chance in revamping our social and economic order; in devising for us a sane, planned economy that will put us on our feet.

Congratulations for the splendid and forthright editorial on the hydrogen bomb and Atlantic Union! The idea of an expanding union of free and self-governing peoples is certainly the political expression of all that is best in the American tradition.

With continuing leadership, the bills now pending in the Senate and the House for implementation of a Federal convention of the Atlantic democracies will not go by default, and the moral and political victory over communism will be won.

Humphrey's Speeches

Although the junior Senator from Minnesota is functioning full time in the Senate, few days go by without one of his vocal contributions before some sort of public gathering. Two questions arise regarding this incessant "extracurricular activity."

1. Since Senator Humphrey's salary is paid, not by the Democratic Party, but by the Nation as a whole, is it honest to devote so few of the 24 hours a day to solid, real study of our complex public questions?

2. Is the Democratic Party so short of effective speakers among Congressmen that it must put up the same spokesman day after day, week after week, for lectures, forums, town meetings?

"School Aid Now"

The day before you published your editorial of February 1, "School Aid Now," the Second National Conference on Church and State, sponsored by Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State (POAU), discussed the school aid question exhaustively. In particular, Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison, founder of the Christian Century, spoke realistically and convincingly at Constitution Hall on the question which you call "the tremendous issue of church and state separation," and showed that the Thomas aid-to-education bill, S. 246, cannot be considered apart from this issue. He said:

"I am well aware that the entanglement of this issue with the Roman Catholic demand for a share in any such Federal aid presents to our Senators and Congressmen a difficult and embarrassing problem in practical politics. But I am bound to say that our lawmakers and law administrators are in danger of misconceiving this issue. . .

"I have no doubt that not a few Senators whose hearts are in the right place on this matter voted for the bill, S. 246, twice passed by the Senate, because they conceived it as the best 'compromise' they could get. But a Senator or Congressman who would vote for any compromise on the separation of church and state simply does not understand what is at stake for Protestant and all non-Roman churches. In any compromise, these churches lose much and gain nothing, while the Roman Church gains much and loses nothing. This is not compromise. It is betrayal. It will not settle anything."

In support of this American constitutional principle, POAU opposes S. 246 because it leaves a loophole for violation and is an encouragement to further violations. POAU opposes tax-paid buses and textbooks for parochial or private schools. It freely recognizes the right of any religious group to maintain its own schools, but holds that it is wrong to compel all the people to pay taxes in assistance of special schools which some people prefer to the public schools that are open to everybody.

POAU insists:

1. The educational benefits of any Federal act should be limited strictly to free tax-supported, publicly controlled educational institutions, whether or not State constitutions or laws directly or indirectly permit use of State funds for sectarian educational institutions.

2. The measure should be for educational services alone. Health services, for example, should be considered on their merits apart from any educational bill and, if granted, should provide for administration through public health agencies in behalf of all the community.

3. To prevent violation of these principles there should be provision for judicial review so as to insure against unlawful diversion of Federal funds for sectarian purposes.

Emotional Armament

By Malvina Lindsay

Future Fears

A PATTERN of homicide running through the news has caused many readers to turn from these shocking slayings thinking sadly, "If only——"

Yes, if only those tortured persons who have killed children, parents, wives, husbands, had been helped early enough to resolve their fears and conflicts, many households would have been spared heartbreak, the taxpayers spared great expense. And if only society had not so stupidly contributed to the contagion of fear—including that of cancer—some of these tragedies might have been averted, among them that of the 21-year-old girl who fatally shot her sick father.

With fear on the rampage around the world and being stepped up now in this once-complacent country by new action in the armament race, the question of preventing mental imbalance and even the common garden variety of jitters becomes more pressing. Calm, emotionally mature persons are the first line of civilian defense. Moreover the Nation can't pay for superbombs and keep running up its bills in caring for the mentally ill and subsidizing the emotionally incompetent.

EIGHT million Americans are now suffering from pronounced mental disease and the care of these is highly expensive. Violent results of emotional illness cost the state enormously in trials and in the lifetime care of defendants committed to mental institutions.

Preparation for living with hydrogen bombs and other threats and complexities of the present begin naturally with children. Defendants in most recent bizarre slayings had shown erratic behavior in childhood. The American Psychiatric Association in a study of 25 young criminal offenders found that emotional disturbance in childhood growing out of family background had been the chief force leading to their lives of crime.

But, asks the average citizen, "What about the National Mental Health Act? Isn't that taking care of everything?" Since the act was passed in 1947 about 100 new mental health clinics have been established, and about 200 existing clinics expanded, the United States Public Health Service reports.

That is only a drop in the bucket, considering the need. But it is a start. Also research in mental illness fostered under the act may lead to means of more effective action. And many States are acting to prevent the development of the problem person. They are increasing child guidance clinics, educating parents and other adults by films, literature, radio, programs, study group discussions.

THUS, eventually we may have an end of the common, hopeless discussion that goes like this: "Too bad about Bill's breakup . . ." "Yes, but what could you expect considering his parents? . . ." "But I suppose they did the best they knew how. No one had taught them how to watch for these mental quirks . . ." "No, their parents didn't know either . . ."

Working with children is the long-range approach in emotional armament for the era ahead. And a great deal of education for parenthod is now going on, though not enough. But more immediate needs are pressing in a world that seems to have a new and more deadly weapon every few months.

A great many adults with mental and emotional problems can be helped if more facilities are made available. Also a widespread educational program on the need for and means to emotional health is needed, to be carried on by community organizations, churches, schools.

Many an old dog can learn to some extent the trick of handling his emotions if he realizes that his ulcers, asthma, arthritis, other ailments, may be helped by it; if he recognizes that his job, his marital relations, the development and happiness of his children are closely related to his maturity—or his juvenility.

Many a person in the face of future uncertainty, even fear, needs special help in finding a stable island of emotional security within himself. It is a time when Americans need as never before to grow up, and should have more help in doing so.

Cardozo Crowding

As a student of Cardozo High School I would like to express my reactions to the Board of Education's decision to postpone a final vote on the transfer of Cardozo students to Central.

I have never had the privilege of attending a high school that was adequately equipped or not overcrowded. For two of my three years at Cardozo I have attended school on a triple shift, and have been subjected to conditions that I never thought existed in a high school. Our desire for an adequate school building is not prompted by jealousy or selfishness. Whether the building assigned to us is Central or any school of proportionate size is irrelevant. The fact is that a building is desperately needed for 1700 high school students.

To all those who oppose our receiving adequate facilities, I say come to Cardozo any day from from 8:30 to 3:40 and see the obvious and unnecessary waste of time, effort and taxpayers' money.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Hitler And Stalin

THE EVIDENCE is increasing daily that the Soviet timetable has moved into a new phase. As one authority puts it, the Kremlin has now passed the point that Hitler passed with the reoccupation of the Rhineland. The Kremlin is now beginning the phase of accelerated preparatory action—of picking off the exposed salients before attacking the main positions—that Hitler began with the invasion of Austria.

All the Kremlin's bluff and bluster of the last four years have only served to conceal the central reality, which has been the active, intensive build-up of Soviet military strength. The new phase is now opening, just as it did in Hitler's case, because the rearmament effort has begun to produce solid results. Hence the Kremlin is encouraged, just as Hitler was, to take larger measures and to run greater risks.

A great deal of pure nonsense has been talked and written on this head, mainly to the effect that the Soviet Union has enjoyed dominant military power ever since the end of the Second World War. In point of fact, however, from the end of the war until this year, the Soviet Union had no atomic bomb, no air defense whatever, and no solid industrial base. The Western confederation, on the other hand, possessed atomic bombs. Despite demobilization, the Western confederation also retained the strategic air power to deliver these bombs to the undefended cities of Russia. This situation was a decisive deterrent as long as it lasted.

BUT THIS situation has now been liquidated by Soviet rearmament. As Secretary for Air Stuart Symington pointed out in his courageous and illuminating Texas speech, the Kremlin has not merely overcome all the difficulties listed above, it has also built up the greatest air force and submarine fleet in the world, to supplement the Red army's strength.

The Kremlin's planners are justified in deriving a glowing new self-confidence from their revolutionary readjustment of the world power balance. This new self-confidence is already being reflected, moreover, in certain actions which have received far too little attention in the American press.

Of these actions, the most important to date is the extraordinary Soviet recognition of the Communist guerilla movement of Ho Chi Minh as the real government of French Indo-China. This step has been taken at a time when Paris has finally given independence to Indo-China, under the government of the Emperor Bao Dai, and at a time when American and British recognition of Bao Dai is momentarily expected.

Soviet recognition of Ho Chi Minh unquestionably means that Ho Chi Minh's guerillas will be openly and actively supported by the Chinese Communists (who have also recognized Ho), just as the Greek guerillas were supported by the Bulgars and the Albanians. Furthermore, the French Communist Party has simultaneously been ordered into action. The French dockworkers are now striking to prevent arms shipments to Bao Dai. In short, every measure this side of open, armed invasion of French Indo-China, is now being taken by the Kremlin.

THERE ARE other aspects of the Soviet timetable's new phase, such as the increasing effort to isolate all satellites from the world; the increasing tendency to force upon the satellites overtly Moscovite administrations; and the increasing arrogance of the Kremlin in its dealings with the Western powers.

But just as Hitler's second phase had one main theme, which was Austria, so the Kremlin's second phase will so have one main theme, which will be the Far East. If Indo-China alone can be captured, the rest of Asia will be rather rapidly consumed in the ensuing chain reaction. Great gains are promised at small cost. As in the case of the Nazi invasion of Austria, the risk of provoking firm countermeasures is exactly proportioned to the degree of progress of rearmament.

Furthermore, in the infinitely vaster panorama now confronting us, where the Far East has Austria's old place, western Europe has the former position of Czechoslovakia. The scene of action will again shift westward, whenever the Soviet margin of strength has been suitably widened. The experts put this date some time between 1952, when the Kremlin will have laid by a respectable stockpile of atomic bombs, and 1955, when all Soviet armament plans now culminate.

Just as Stanley Baldwin, Neville Chamberlain and John Simon had to decide the fate of the world in the bemused '30s, so Harry Truman, Dean Acheson and Louis Johnson have to do so today. The future would be more encouraging if so many members of the Administration did not already sound like Lord Baldwin at his worst.

Lewis' Future

By Marquis Childs

UMW Monopoly And Price Of Coal

NEXT SUNDAY, which is Lincoln's birthday, John L. Lewis will be 70 years old. For a good part of that long lifetime Lewis has exercised a power as nearly autocratic as any in this country.

Childs

But it is sometimes forgotten that even this autocrat with a flair for melodrama has had his ups and downs. At the bottom of the depression his union was shattered by rebellion. With thousands of miners out of work the union treasury was nearly flat.

Lewis hitched a ride on the New Deal in its NRA phase. With the aid of the Roosevelt Administration, he welded the United Mine Workers into a personal hierarchy with himself at the top of the pyramid. In a deal with the coal owners he got the closed shop and the checkoff of union dues and his position appeared to be untouchable.

In my opinion he is riding for a fall in this late phase of his fantastic career. The reasons why this appears to be so have little to do with Lewis' union practices or even with the intricate politics of organized labor as they weave through both major parties.

The basic reasons lie in the economy of the coal industry and, in particular, as that industry relates to the rest of the Nation's economic life. Coal is being priced out of the competitive market in one field after another.

MILLIONS of householders have switched from coal to oil and natural gas. Even in New England, remote from the fields, natural gas lines are being pushed. While that movement has been temporarily held up by differences over financing, it will in all probability soon go forward again. Nearly two fifths of the Nation's locomotives are now powered by oil or electricity.

It is true, of course, that in many industrial processes there can be no substitution. That is so, in part at least, in the steel industry.

But here the demands that Lewis has been able to enforce because of his monopolistic hold have created a distortion with serious implications for the whole economy. It has contributed to price rises that have steadily pushed up the whole price level. As a result many Americans—in agriculture and outside the unionized industries—are being priced out of the market.

This can become a factor to be taken serious account of perhaps even by the end of this year. If enough people are priced out of the market, it will be quickly felt in a lessening demand for consumer goods. Even a mild depression would be likely to play havoc with the welfare system that Lewis has got out of the coal industry; a system that has little relation to actuarial soundness.

THE UNITED Mine Workers is not the only union that has exploited a monopoly position. Another that comes to mind at once is the printers' union, with its demands that have played a part in the demise of so many newspapers and, therefore, in a sharp decline in the number of jobs.

The public finds itself more and more often caught between the maneuvers of the managers of big business and big labor. Senator Willis Robertson put in a bill recently that would bring trade unions under the antitrust laws if it can be established that they do in fact exercise an unreasonable monopoly in an industry affecting the Nation's health and welfare.

There is a larger question here of public sympathy. Mining is rough, hard, dirty, dangerous work and the public, in general, has been sympathetic with the men who work the mines. There has been approval for the very real benefits Lewis has brought to the miners.

But the lines between sympathy and resentment is a narrow one. It is particularly thin in a period of stress and strain when many families are struggling with part-time employment and high prices. A prolonged coal strike in defiance of a Taft-Hartley injunction could work great harm.

By an unhappy coincidence the sharp political controversy over the Taft-Hartley Act makes for added confusion. Even officials charged by law with carrying out Taft-Hartley provisions are wading into the quarrel. Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, chose this moment to make a foolish attack on the members of the board.

Lewis comes of long-lived and hardy Welsh stock. His mother died recently at the age of 91. He may yet go through a whole new cycle of decline and fall and rise again. But his present pose, defying the lightning, the fates and most of the American people, is a chancy one.

Truman Forces Accuse GOP Of Abandoning Rights Pledges

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Administration Democrats yesterday accused the Republican Party of "backtracking" on 1948 civil rights pledges in the new GOP declaration of party principles.

The charge was made in the Senate by Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), chief author of the Democratic civil rights plank. Humphrey said the GOP plank deliberately courted Southern Democratic favor.

Other Truman Democrats, in statements off the floor, charged Republicans were toning down their strong 1948 rights stand because they didn't want to vote on the issue.

They accused Republicans of coining "socialism" as a last-minute issue because "the welfare state issue didn't work" and the GOP feared to hit the "Fair Deal" directly.

Capehart Delivers Reply

Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), however, taking the Senate floor against Humphrey, said the Democrats had misconstrued the new Republican declaration of policy.

"This statement was issued as a supplement to the 1948 Republican platform," said Capehart, "meaning simply that it's an addition to what we said in the platform."

Lambasting Americans for Democratic Action, headed by Humphrey, Capehart told the Senate:

"We are getting socialism through the back door in America. Don't say it can't happen here."

Lucas Hits at Statement

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) and House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (Mass.) in separate statements meanwhile slammed at the GOP statement as "innocuous" and "a lot of general platitudes."

Lucas charged the Republicans "shied away" from the civil rights issue on the eve of House and Senate action and "as usual . . . are not very much interested in civil rights."

McCormack told newsmen: "So far as they (Republicans) are concerned, the 1948 election never took place . . . I thoroughly understand the distressed state of mind of Progressive Republicans on the civil rights plank and the statement in general."

House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), who has been trying to call up the FEPC bill, said the GOP civil rights plank "don't mean a darn thing—It very plainly shows they don't want to vote on FEPC."

Democrats' Plank Adopted

In his Senate speech, Humphrey charged Republicans adopted approximatately the same civil rights plank the Democrats used in 1940 and 1944. He said it was the same draft "the Dixiecrats were willing to accept" in the 1948 Democratic platform, but the Democrats adopted stronger wording.

He said the Republicans and Dixiecrats were so close together on the civil rights plank that "possibly" they ought to join in a "legal" alliance as Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio) proposed.

Lucas interrupted Humphrey to say Republicans already have tried every issue from "regimentation" to "the welfare state."

"They've finally found a slogan, 'Liberty or Socialism,'" Lucas said. "I would like to know what liberties have been taken away from the American people. They have more liberties today than at any other period in our history."

GOP Disappointment

Although a large majority of Republicans concurred in the new policy statement, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) and a small group of Republican Progressives voiced "disappointment" in the civil rights plank and several other features.

Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) yesterday disclosed he had lined up with Lodge in opposing the statement. Ives said the statement "falls far short" of the 1948 Republican platform on both civil rights and labor-management relations and "fails to provide adequate or appropriate answers to the problems which are involved."

OEEC Forsees 'Manageable' European Situation in 1952

terday. Connally said Hoffman gave an intimation he was ready to "go down a bit" from the present $3,100,000,000 figure in President Truman's budget estimates for ECA.

But Hoffman warned the committee that any drastic cut would be disastrous. Some legislators have urged that a further 800 million dollars or one billion dollars be sliced from the ECA request.

The report made much of the theme that European recovery faces problems, many of which are not within the power of the European nations to solve.

On their own part, they pledged themselves to efforts for higher production and productivity, more trade among themselves and firm steps toward integration. All of these things, they said, are necessary.

But, the report pointed out, United States policies are also vital in the recovery field.

It said that there would be no hope, for example, if the United States blocked increased imports from Europe by tariffs or other restrictions. It warned also against the danger of debarring Europe from traditional sources of dollar earnings such as shipping and shipbuilding.

But most of all, the report emphasized the tremendous role that would be played toward world, as well as European, recovery by American investments abroad—in Europe, and in other areas, including those now underdeveloped.

This would not only permit higher production in those places where Europe could buy and thus save dollars. It would also allow Europe larger sales to them, and a chance to earn more dollars.

The OEEC noted that in this process of world rehabilitation, European recovery had now reached the point where Marshall Plan nations could help out, and be on the supplying end as well as the receiving.

In this connection, the report painted a situation after 1952 in which the problem of the dollar deficit would be a general one, and not such a preponderantly European one as it had been in 1947 and 1948.

Then, 75 percent of the dollar deficit was accounted for by Western Europe. In the future, Europe's deficit would be less pronounced, and more in proportion to that of the rest of the world.

This clearly implied, then, that the recovery approach called for after 1952 was not a continuation of a European Marshall Plan, but one more in line with President Truman's Point IV program.

It would be directed toward expansion of world production, and the freezing of world, not just European, trade.

'Unreservedly Successful'

Discussing progress at the halfway mark of the Marshall Plan, the report strongly argued that ECA had been "unreservedly successful" both politically and economically.

On the first point, it noted that in 1947 the threat of dissolution of the fabric of European society was imminent. The threat is still in the background, it warned, but its immediacy has been removed.

On the economic side, the report pointed to figures of agricultural and industrial production increases, a 10 percent jump in productivity and the prospects for further increases in the future.

It said no comparable advance was made in the four years after World War I. It added that the progress of recovery had exceeded the most optimistic hopes of any reasonable observer in 1947.

Although ECA Chief Hoffman has expressed disappointment that progress toward European economic integration has not been sufficient, the report implied that accomplishments in other fields now made integration possible for the future.

Conditions to Be Met

To achieve integration, it was argued, three conditions had to be fulfilled.

1. Great increases in production, so that the acute shortages were cured.

2. Stoppage of the wildfire trend toward inflation, by obtaining internal stability in the participating countries.

3. Getting the intra-European balance of payments and trade more into equilibirum.

These conditions, it was indicated, have been achieved. Therefore, it was hoped that the way was now paved toward agreement on elimination of most of the remaining restrictions to trade, and on a European payments and clearings arrangement.

An interesting aspect of the report was the fact that though each country forecast substantial production improvements in the next two years, these will not result in much of an increase in the standard of living. Rather, they will be plowed back into new and larger productive equipment.

The standards of living, therefore, will remain not much better than now, about 10 percent per capita below prewar levels.

Maryland Committee Blasts DP Program, Then Resigns

not indeed in the best interests of the United States."

The DP situation in Maryland and Virginia has been the subject of scores of complaints. The Maryland Farm Bureau on January 11 registered bitter disappointment and asked for stiff laws governing DPs now here.

On December 31, a total of 402 families listing 196 persons had been brought into Maryland, records show.

Anne Arundel got fewer than most counties. The records a month earlier showed Queen Anne County with 41 families and 11 persons the largest. Howard had 36 families and 88 persons; Carroll 31 families and 78 persons; Charles County 15 families and 67 persons, Prince Georges 13 families and 46 persons, Anne Arundle 2 families and 36 persons, Montgomery 9 families and 30 persons, Calvert 8 families and 35 persons and St. Mary's two families and nine persons.

In January State officials estimated that 40 percent of the DPs had left their sponsoring farms, some within a week of their arrival.

A recent congressional report showed Virginia, Maryland and Mississippi as the only three States dissatisfied with operation of the DP program.

Maryland farmers, according to David L. B. Fringer, Maryland Employment Service director said, suffer from chronic shortage of skilled farm labor. At the same time there is a surplus of unskilled labor. When the DP program started, it was thought Maryland offered a great opportunity to skilled farm hands.

Instead, all types of workers, from dentists and doctors, to butchers, shoemakers, and even a 10-year professor of civil engineering in a large European college, were imported as skilled farm hands.

The majority in Maryland were Ukrainians, brought by the United Ukrainian-American Relief Association. Other agencies bringing in DPs were the National Catholic Welfare Society, the Lutheran League, the Hebrew Immigrant Aid, Church World Service, United Service for the New Americans, and the Friends Society.

Ukranians Top List

"We felt that in giving asylum to the oppressed and needy refugees we would be giving new hope to people desperately in need of assistance," the Anne Arundel committeemen wrote.

"We assumed that they would be carefully screened, and that we would be opening the door of opportunity to people who were qualified for the work that they had represented themselves competent to do . . . and who desired, above all things, to attain citizenship.

"Devoid of Gratitude"

"It has been our experience that while some are giving a high degree of satisfaction, many who have had extraordinarily fine placements have not only been unqualified for the work they had represented themselves capable of doing, but have proved themselves devoid of gratitude or a sense of moral obligation.

"It is an uncontestable fact that no agency of the Federal Government has any clear idea of the whereabouts of thousands of refugees who have recently entered the United States," the letter continued.

The program, the three wrote, "as now administered, is of such dubious value that we can no longer conscientiously participate in it."

for your valentine

Hearts and flowers were all right for the Victorians. Nowadays affection takes a more practical slant. And the nicest proof of your sentiment is something masculine and useful, yet the very finest of its kind . . . the intangible extra that goes with every gift from Lewis & Thos. Saltz.

"His Majesty" Neckwear . . . for the King in your life. Pure silk or pure satin, hand-sewn, and silk lined; fifty inches long. Imaginative, unhackneyed designs worked out in two, three, and four color combinations. Newest designs are Ships of Old, Moth and Flame, Java, Primrose.
$7.50 to $12.50

Other Fine Neckwear
$2.50 to $12.50

White Nylon Shirts . . . first love in many men's lives. Now available in a beautiful plain weave as well as an open dobby weave. All DuPont nylon, a superior nylon made especially for fine tailoring. French or button cuffs. Sizes 14 to 17; sleeves 32 to 35.

White Terry Snaparongs . . . 1950's cleverest Valentine. Quick cover-up for undressed moments. Absorbent white terry cloth styled to fit a man's middle, with three snap fasteners for maximum comfort. Big patch pocket at side for toilet articles, cigarettes, etc.

Imported Cashmere Sweaters . . . Cupid with a Scotch accent. Made in Scotland by Braemar, Pringle, and Robertson of pure Indian cashmere, known for its gossamer softness and warmth without weight. Solid colors and heather mixtures; sizes small to extra large.
$15 & $16.50

Long Sleeve Cashmere Sweaters
$20 & $22.50

Mail and Phone Orders Filled. Gift Wrapped on Request.

Federal Brakes Held Impeding Flow of Capital

By S. Oliver Goodman

Robert P. Boylan, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, urged Government leaders last night to remove the impediments on the flow of private capital into industry.

R. P. Boylan

He addressed a dinner meeting at the Shoreham Hotel attended by nearly 500 persons and sponsored by the Association of Stock Exchange Firms. Among the guests were Senators, Congressmen, Treasury, SEC officials and other Government leaders.

"Underinvestment is putting a cloud on the economic horizon," Boylan said. "Rewards for achievement are taxed so steeply that they reduce the incentive of those who operate business . . . and those who supply its capital."

Another disturbing factor, he stated, is the widespread impression that Government and business are unfriendly, "that some deep-seated antagonism divides them."

Boylan listed four main factors which are damming the flow of investment capital:

1. Restrictive taxes such as the capital gains levy and double taxation of dividends.

2. Enormous growth of the Federal establishment and the indifference of many people toward shrinking the size and cost of Government.

3. Tax-free organizations now doing an estimated 10-billion-dollar-a-year business annually, resulting not only in unfair competition but loss of Federal revenue.

4. The taking over by Government of lending functions which properly belong to private capital markets.

Importance of stimulating new investments, Boylan asserted, is emphasized by figures showing that it takes about five billion dollars annually in new investment to create some 700,000 new jobs for young people entering the labor market each year.

Earlier in the evening, Clement A. Evans, chairman of the National Association of Securities Dealers, cited the major role played by the over-the-counter securities market in financing the growth and maintenance of America's economy.

Benjamin H. Griswold, president of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms, pointed out that security investment is not confined to a small segment of the population. Latest figures show, he said, that 710 major companies have nearly 14 million stockholders. At least six of the big corporations, he added, have more shareholders than employes. One is the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which alone has more than 800,000 stockholders.

UPTURN: State and muncipal issues totaling $235,963,044 were sold last month, the biggest January aggregate in 10 years. The publication Bond Buyer, reporting this yesterday, said the largest single issue last month was the State of Washington's offering of 70 million dollars of veterans bonus bonds.

ODD LOTS: The auditors section of the D. C. Bankers Association at its meeting Thursday in the Burlington Hotel will hear Judge E. Barrett Prettyman. His topic will be "Things Are Not As Bad As They Seem" . . . G. H. Tennant Co. has opened a Washington office under the management of R. L. Lindboe . . . The Television Center will open a store February 15 at 520 10th st. nw., President Ben Weiner announced . . . Another increase in carpet prices, effective March 1, was announced yesterday by James Lees & Sons Co.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Carl H. Ellingson, president of First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington, will address the Allegheny County Savings & Loan League Friday in Pittsburgh on "Threat of State Banking" . . . John F. Walton will resign as general sales manager of Gulf Oil Corp. March 1 to become associated with T. Mellon & Sons, Pittsburgh banking firm . . . The new company of Standard Electronics Corp. will succeed Western Electric Co. as Graybar Electric Co.'s supplier of radio transmitting equipment . . . John H. Spangler has been appointed division president of the National Carbon division of Union Carbide & Carbon Corp.

PUBLIC SERVICE: The role of advertising as a public servant was stressed yesterday by Leonard Trester at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Advertising Club in the Statler. Trester, director of public policy of the General Outdoor Advertising Co., said that "largely as result of the work of organized advertising in this area, private philanthropy reached an all-time high . . . in 1949."

EARNINGS: Reliable Stores Corp. reported net income of $1,501,004 or $4.60 a share for 1949, compared with $1,845,770 or $5.41 a share in 1948. Other earnings statements:

Bowser Management Changed in Policy Row

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 7 (A.P.).—Directors of Bowser, Inc., maker of gasoline pumps, yesterday elected a new president and two new board members.

The resignations of the former president and five board members were accepted. The board members said they resigned because they were "unable to agree with the policies of the controlling stockholders."

E. C. Marsh of Fort Wayne was elected president to succeed M. B. Miles of Birmingham, Mich.

New board members are Robert Holt and Robert D. Gordon, both of Chicago. They fill vacancies left by the resignations of James M. Barrett, jr., Harold M. Treen, Neil A. McKay and Thomas A. McKiernan, all of Fort Wayne, and John M. Young, Alamo, Tex.

Acute Water Shortage Seen For Counties

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 7 (A.P.).—A Johns Hopkins University expert predicted today that Prince Georges and Montgomery counties will be hit by a water shortage next summer "unless the rainfall is excessive."

Dr. Abel Wolman made that statement before the Senate Rules Committee during a hearing on a 45-million-dollar Baltimore City water loan bill. He was one of several witnesses called in by the city to buttress Baltimore's contention that the bill deals with an "acute emergency."

Dr. Wolman said the water resources of Baltimore City and Prince Georges and Montgomery counties have been hit by the unexpected rises in population. He said the situations in all three subdivisions have become acute.

Wolman predicted authorities of the two counties will have to impose restrictions on the use of water when the weather turns warm unless the rainfalls are much heavier than normal.

Afterwards Senator Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) said he did not consider the predicament of the counties as acute as Wolman had pictured it.

He pointed out that the counties have an agreement with the District of Columbia under which they can draw on Washington's water supply if necessary.

Sothoron said the main source of the trouble seems to be a filtration plant with a capacity of about 23 million gallons a day. During the summer, he said, the need for water raises sometimes to about 30 million gallons a day.

School Cost Saving of $60,000 Seen by Architectural Plan

A standard set of architectural plans for its schools would save Prince Georges County an estimated $60,000 to $70,000 per year in construction costs, County Building Inspector Perce L. Wolfe declared yesterday.

Wolfe, who spoke before the board of county commissioners at Upper Marlboro, said that amount is being spent in architectural fees under the present building plans. The architects' fees are usually about 6 percent of the total cost of construction.

He pointed out that the plan is now in effect in Montgomery County and said experts at the University of Maryland or Catholic University could go over the master plan to weed out defects.

The commissioners said the plan would be referred to the county's board of education.

The commissioners, by a vote of 3 to 2, approved the rezoning of a 22-acre tract adjacent to Woodlawn that will allow construction of semidetached homes.

The action came in spite of a public meeting held in Hyattsville on January 18 at which about 60 persons protested the move.

At the commissioners' meeting yesterday petitions were presented with 403 persons opposing the rezoning and 49 in favor of the move.

Civic leaders present argue that semidetached homes would jam the schools, and roads, and pointed out that the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission had expressed disapproval of the scheme.

Edwin B. Feldman, Washington builder said approximately 140 homes to sell for about $10,000 will be constructed on the site.

106 Celanese Workers Returned to Cafe Jobs

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 7 (A.P.). One hundred and six employes of the cafeteria at the Amcelle plant of the Celanese Corporation of America today were ordered reinstated to their jobs with back pay.

The ruling was issued by Sidney A. Wolff of the American Arbitration Association in a dispute between the company and Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO.

The company's subletting of its cafeteria led to the disagreement.

Falls Church Retains 'Double Shift'

First and second graders at Fairfax-operated Oak Street Elementary School, Falls Church, will continue on double shifts, the county school board ruled yesterday.

The board's decision, which followed a visit to the school, overrode petitions signed by more than 400 parents urging that additional classrooms be created by partitioning the school cafeteria.

"Rather than eliminate the cafeteria, the board voted to leave the situation 'as is,'" F. W. Robinson, school board chairman, said.

The second grade at ... Street School went on double shift January 27, as the result of transferring about 60 second graders to the school from Madison-Jefferson Elementary School.

The transfer, brought about by overcrowding at Madison-Jefferson, affected children living in Fenwick Park, Jefferson Village Apartments, Tremont Gardens, and Tyler Park.

Wild Blue Yonder Is F St. Off 14th

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: Where's the Navy? . . . Tonight brings the Air Force out in full-quashed 50-missions caps for the Palace Invitation-only preview of "Twelve O'Clock High." . . . The Marines had it last at the Warner for "Sands of Iwo Jima," the Army before that at the Capitol's "Battleground." . . . So, how's about a cheer soon for the Navy? . . . And the Coast Guard . . . F st. will be ablaze with red, white and blue searchlights, the Air Force Band will march into the theater and "The Singing Sergeants" will set the mood with Eighth Air Force songs under Warrant Officer Robert L. Landers . . . Also on hand will be the guy who coauthored the script, Sy Bartlett . . . For himself, Twentieth Century-Fox and Collaborator Beirne Lay, jr., Bartlett will receive a commendation from Maj. William Lawley on behalf of Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg.

FRANCHOT TONE arrived at the Wardman Park yesterday afternoon to tell today's Keith audiences about the picture they'll be seeing, "The Man on the Eiffel Tower," a horror yarn about Paris with himself, Charles Laughton, Burgess Meredith, Robert Hutton and Jean Wallace, once Mrs. Tone . . . The interesting new touch on this one is the Ansco color process to capture the City of Light.

SIGMUND ROMBERG is another visitor, here for his concert Thursday night at Constitution Hall with his own orchestra . . . Romberg, who's written everything from "The Student Prince" to "Up in Central Park," says he'll present "sweet, peaceful, 'middlebrow' music." . . . With him will be four singers who are seldom without a Romberg melody for their own programs—Gene Marvey, Kirsten Kenyon, Christina Carroll and Gail Manners.

JOHN BARRYMORE, JR., who shares top spots with Robert Preston, Robert Sterling and Cathy Downs in "The Sundowners," coming to the Warner, will be exhibiting the profile inherited from his father next week . . . The 17-year-old Barrymore will check in here Monday or Tuesday.

BILL DOLL, long one of New York's top publicity men, is the first of his big time ilk to hit here since you know when . . . He's talking up the return of Jack Kirkland's "Tobacco Road," which comes back to the Howard for another week Friday night . . . Trouble is, we're all written out of this one after its two-week stand a bit back; after a week at the Gotham Apollo, the play's waiting around to find a theater in midtown to try for another run.

JOHN MARTIN, that boyish-looking cellist of the National Symphony who is nonetheless old enough to hold the first desk, will have a telegram tonight from Cousin Mary Martin's "South Pacific" dressing room . . . Martin will be soloist under Howard Mitchell for Richard Strauss' "Don Quixote" . . . Wonder if John 3d, whose second birthday it is today, will take after his noted musical relations.

GORDON MACRAE, the Metro musical star and now the hit of the Association of American Railroads' hour, is in town at the Carlton, where his bosses this afternoon will be tossing a party for the popular young singing star.

THE TEMPLE Players tonight offer their first play, Rose Franken's family drama, "Another Language" . . . The Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q, is the place, 8:30 the hour . . . Maryland U.'s Rudy Pugliese has directed a cast that includes Bunny Kaufmann, Audrey DeYoung, Frances Arent, Ann Orbach, Natalie Mulitz, Ben Davis, Jerome Casper, Ferd Nauheim, James Miller, Larry Cramer and Lewis Mulitz.

HAZEL SCOTT is another visitor of the week, playing her unique Bach-to-Boogie piano Friday night at the National Guard Armory . . . Though you can't exactly say the sparkling lady's a visitor; she takes one weekend out of every month's concert schedule to be with her husband, Representative Adam Clayton Powell, at his Washington stronghold.

GILBERT AND SULLIVAN are a team a year's hardly a year without. . . . So the Air Force success with "The Mikado," announces it will present "Iolanthe" on March 1, 2, 3 and 4 in Lisner Andtiorium. . . . Seats will be on sale downtown at the Hays Concert Bureau, Mrs. Stabler's Ticket Mart (in Brantano's, F st.) and the AAA.

NOR IS A YEAR a year without a Minstrel Show, which the St. Jerome's Toly Name Society of Hyattsville will be taking care of Saturday night, Sunday matinee and evening. . . . Under the direction of Robert D'Orsay, this will be the third annual minstrel for the benefit of St. Jerome's School. . . . In the cast will be "Mit" Jones, Mayor Jack Aiello, Jimmy Lee, Harry Hellman, "Bones" Shoemakers, "Bass Viol" Woods, Charlie Eckenrode and Jack French at the piano

PLAYFUL EVE: Barbara Stanwyck in "The Lady Eve," that merry comedy that started the Preston Sturges series. With Henry Fonda, Eric Blore and Eugene Pallette in the leads, this revival is at the Unnatural National

Goodwill Industries To Launch New Drive

The Davis Memorial Goodwill Industries membership drive will be launched at a luncheon Thursday at the Hotel 2400. It will be a joint meeting of the Industries and Goodwill Guild.

Williams Gets Baseball's Highest Pay, $125,000

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has now lost his distinction of being as highly paid as any baseball player. Ted Williams of the Red Sox zoomed into a new bracket yesterday when he inked his name on a document calling for a wage reported at $125,000, which also shaded the mere $100,000 stipend of the Yankees' Joe Di Maggio.

The Red Sox didn't reveal Williams' exact salary, but neither did they discourage the $125,000 estimate. Naturally, they are pleased to have it believed that their guy comes higher than the Yankees' DiMaggio. It is one way of encouraging the idea that Williams outrates DiMag as a ball player, a topic that has been debated for several years.

POVICH

In fact, the Red Sox may be trying to win the argument on the juvenile basis of my-old-man-is-richer-than-your-old-man. Even when it was known that DiMag was drawing a hot 100 grand last season, the Boston people contented themselves with smirking and thus indicating that Williams was doing even better.

What's the ceiling on ball players' salaries, anyway? The evidence is there ain't none, as long as there are clubs rich enough like the Yanks and Red Sox to contest for the vague honor of paying the most money.

AT THAT, if any player since Ruth could command 125 Gs a year, Williams seems to be the guy. And with the club owners' profits what they are in these inflated times—the Cardinals made a million dollars last season without winning the pennant— Williams' salary isn't quite out of whack. With all due respect to DiMaggio, Williams is the biggest figure in the game.

He's led the American League in hitting more times than anybody now playing ball, and when he hasn't finished on top he's been runner-up. He usually drives in the most runs, scores the most runs, and hits the most homers. It is no coincidence that he is walked more times than any other batter in the game. He's the most-feared guy who lugs a bat up to the plate. But Williams qualifies for the game's biggest salary on yet another count.

Big Ted has that wonderful substance that is called color. Like Ruth, whether he's striking out or hitting one over the fence, he's intensely interesting. He inspires no middle ground. You either cheer him or boo him. He can either blow his top or be downright casual about striking out. He lifts an otherwise drab Red Sox team into the headlines.

IT'S PRETTY significant that on the same day Williams signs for $125,000, George Kell, who beat him out for the league batting title in 1949 by two-thousandths of a point, is signed by the Tigers for a salary reported to be $37,000. The conclusion is that Kell ain't no Williams despite the fact he happened to outhit him last season.

The fact that Kell is a more accomplished ball player than Williams in most respects cuts no ice in the salary department. Georgie is a nice boy, the best third baseman in the American League in contrast to the slow-footed, careless Williams, who isn't rated among the good outfielders. And he did outhit Ted last season. But he's not the drawing card that Williams is.

Kell doesn't hit those home runs that Williams hits, and up at the plate he's an unexciting guy compared to Tall Ted who is a breathtaking personality from the moment he gets off his haunches in the batters' circle and advances toward the plate, swinging a pair of bats for exercise. In the manner that he digs his heels into the dirt of the batters' box, makes those first preliminary menacing gestures at the pitcher and then waits for one to come his way, Williams is a show.

AND IT MUST be observed that in the past two years, Williams has been more of a team player. Under Joe McCarthy he has ridden himself of what appeared to be his don't-care attitude and has been hustling. Time was when Williams was downright reluctant to chase a ball that might have gone past him in left field. He's full of vinegar these days.

It used to be that Williams didn't take the business of playing the outfield seriously. In fact, it was said of him the only reason he made a catch was because he figured it would get the side out quicker and thus bring about his next turn at bat the sooner. Of Williams it still can be said that hitting is more of a hobby with him than it is, or was, with any other ball player.

Those taxes he'll have to pay on his 125 grand will bite deeply into Williams' net, and it is estimated that he won't actually draw down much more than $70,000. Dehydrated like that, Williams' salary isn't quite as good as the $80,000 Ruth drew at his peak in the happy days of low income taxes and the 100-cent dollar. But the $125,000 figure is there for all to gaze on, and yesterday was a day to be remembered in baseball annals. It happened, you see, on Babe Ruth's birthday.

Evans Changes His Mind

Trout Gets Away From Nats, Tigers Call Off Calvert Deal

Paul (Dizzy) Trout, 215-pound right-hander of the Detroit Tigers, is the big one who got away—from the Nats—yesterday. Their attempt to acquire Trout in a swap for Pitcher Paul Calvert fizzled.

General Manager Billy Evans of the Tigers brought an end to the negotiations with the simple pronouncement "it's all off."

Evans, who had previously agreed to the deal conditional on the approval of Detroit Manager Red Rolfe, suddenly underwent a change of heart yesterday.

Without bothering to consult Rolfe, who is vacationing in Florida, Evans told Vice President Calvin Griffith of the Nats he had turned down their offer.

The prime reason, said Evans, is that the Tigers are still hopeful of using Trout in a "package deal," with another club. "We have several bids for Dizzy and I think we can trade him to better advantage than in a Calvert deal," he said.

The Tigers' general manager reiterated that his club intended to dispose of the big pitcher who won only three games, lost six last year, and was dissatisfied with his relief roles.

"He can't break into our starting group," said Evans, "and he doesn't want to pitch relief. I don't blame him for that. He's a big fellow who needs steady work to keep himself in shape."

Evans declared that he had broached to the Nats a pair of deals involving First Baseman Eddie Robinson and Pitcher Mickey Harris but "they were uninterested."

Asked if the Washington club intended to renew negotiations with the Tigers, Vice President Griffith stated, "not at this time."

Greenbelt, Blades Win

Bladensbuarg sprang a stunning upset in the Prince Georges High league last night, defeating Hyattsville, 48-41, in an overtime. In the first game of the doubleheader at College Park, Greenbelt downed Mount Rainier, 49-37.

Donnie Green, playing only the last quarter and the overtime period, scored 11 points to pace the Blades' attack.

Indianapolis Too Much for Caps, 88-81

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 7.—The Washington Capitols had the size but couldn't utilize it tonight, and they took an 88-81 beating from the yonnger, spryer Indianapolis Olympians in a National Basketball Association game.

Only a flurry of baskets in the closing minutes kept the score from being a genuine reflection of the difference between the two clubs, in their first meeting of the season.

The Olympians led from start to finish, and late in the final quarter were as much as 19 points in front.

The defeat was the Caps' fourth in their last five games, bringing their won-lost record to 23-25 for the season.

The victory snapped the Olympians out of their worst losing streak, which had stretched over four games.

Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones put in 18 points for the winners, followed by Alex Groza, the BAA's No. 2 scorer, with 16.

Little Fred Scolari was the best of the losers, getting 14 points as well as playing a sound floor game.

Macauley Scores 34 But Royals Win, 90-84

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 7 (AP). The Rochester Royals raced to their 23d NBA victory in as many home starts tonight, beating the St. Louis Bombers, 90-84.

St. Louis trailed by 20 points on three occasions in the third quarter, but the Royals' fat advantage faded under the pressure of shots by Easy Ed Macauley and Belus Smawley. Macauley amassed a 34-point total.

Stags Beat Celtics 11th Straight Time

Boston, Feb. 7 (AP).—The Chicago Stags tramped the luckless Boston Celtics tonight 91-86 in an NOA game. It was Chicago's fifth straight victory over the Celtics this season and their 11th consecutive triumph in two years. The Stags trailed most of the game, but came on to win with but five minutes of play remaining.

W&M Upsets N. C. State

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—William and Mary's Indians, unranked nationally, stunned North Carolina State, 54-50, tonight in a Southern Conference basketball game before a packed house of 5000 in Norfolk's municipal auditorium.

It was State's second defeat in conference play and put Duke in first place. State is ranked eighth in the Nation.

William and Mary beat State in the last 35 seconds after the Wolfpack, battling for its prestige, had pulled up all even at 49-49 from a halftime deficit of 23-31.

Jere Bunting, flashy Indian guard, broke the deadlock with a long set shot. Center Chet Giermak, who led the William and Mary scoring for the night with 17 points, sank a foul shot to make it 52-49. Paul Horvath closed the margin with a foul conversion for State which made it 52-50, but Fred Allen cinched things a second later by sinking a field goal for W & M which finished the scoring.

St. Martin's Wins

Undefeated St. Martin's, led by Hank Sinsky and Henry Houck, waltzed to a 51-38 victory over previously unbeaten Blessed Sacrament in the CYO Unlimited League first half playoff last night at McKinley Tech. Sinsky scored 20 points; Houck, 17. The losers' Bristuso took honors with 23 points.

A $125,000 CATCH—Ted Williams, American League's most valuable player currently appearing in a sportsman show in Boston, tries his hand with a tuna rod. Later, Ted made a catch of a $125,000 contract with the Red Sox for next season. Earl MacMahon, Maine fisherman (left), and Joy Fitzsimmons, granddaughter of the former heavyweight champion Bob Fitzsimmons, look on. The slugger said of his new contract, "Hope I deserve it"

'Hope I Deserve It,' Says Big Slugger of $20,000 Salary Boost

Boston, Feb. 7 (AP).—Red Sox Slugger Ted Williams today signed the highest salaried contract in baseball history—for an estimated $125,000.

And he was as happy about it as an oil speculator striking a dozen new wells.

But neither Williams nor General Manager Joe Cronin, who presided over the Fenway Park formalities, would divulge the exact terms.

Yes, it is a better contract than I had last season," Williams replied when pressed on that angle. "I can't say more than that."

But Ted, seldom before seem in public in such jovial spirits, did say more.

"I am very happy about my contract and I only hope I deserve it," he elaborated. "And I hope that my play this season will warrant having such a fine deal with the club."

That was enough to get the assembled writers, who overflowed absent Owner Tom Yawkey's private Fenway Park office in an estimating mood.

Red Sox salaries, under the Yawkey regime, always have been considered club secrets. But there have been enough leaks to indicate that Williams drew $90,000 in straight pay last season and had several bonus clauses based on attendance. Since the Red Sox drew 1,596,650, a new club record, Williams probably received another $15,000 for a grand total of $105,000.

Asked if he considered his new financial deal the biggest Boston has seen since the $1,500,000 Brink holdup, Williams replied:

"I guess so. Wasn't that a haul! But you know I'd rather take a little less."

"Just how much less?" a writer asked.

"I can't say," the American League's outstanding performer replied. "You'll have to ask this 'whalebelly" next to me."

Responding to that pointed reference to his avoirdupois, Cronin, choking with laughter, responded:

"Ted has signed for the 1950 season and, naturally, you'll be surprised, if I again tell you that we regard financial matters with our players as strictly our own business."

Boston's lanky home-run belter arrived here last Wednesday to attend the Boston baseball writers' dinner and appear in a fly-casting role at the Sportsmen's Show during its Boston and New York runs.

But weeks ago, according to intimates, Williams and Cronin straightened out contract matters by long distance telephone conversations, during which the player balked at further bonus clauses. As a result, today's formalities came under the heading of a straight publicity gag.

Williams, scheduled for three show appearances during the afternoon and night, was in costume—an open sport shirt, brown slacks, brown suede shoes and a bulky lumberman's jacket.

"I'm having a lot of fun doing my act," he explained. "And the people who come to the show are wonderful. They know all about fishing and hunting, which is much more than I can say about many you find in baseball parks.

"Even the autograph seekers are polite, not like the ones you run into during the baseball season," he added with a wide grin. "I suppose that's because they are influenced by fish and game writ-

Mathewson's 'Highest' Pay Was $10,000

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Ted William's 1950 salary of a cool $125,000 far overshadows anything ever paid to a ball player before.

Babe Ruth's $80,000 salary in 1930 and '31 was tops in the old days. Other "moderns" who commanded man-sized salaries salaries included Ty Cobb ($60,000), Rogers Hornsby ($40,000), Lou Gehrig" ($37,500), Dazzy Vance ($30,000) and Dizzy Dean ($27,000).

That's a far cry from the real old days when Ed Walsh received only $4500 for winning 40 games for the White Sox in 1908 and Hans Wagner drew down the magnificent sum of $5000 for leading the National League batters year after year.

And what about Christy Mathewson, whose $10,000 in 1914, then tops in baseball, was considered "out of this world" for a ball player. That was the highest salary ever drawn by the immortal Giant pitcher who racked up 373 victories.

Kell Signs For $37,500; Priddy Balks

Detroit, Feb. 7 (AP).—American League batting champion George Kell, who beat out Ted Williams, .3429 to .3427, signed his 1950 contract today to highlight a full day's activity around Detroit Tiger headquarters.

The third baseman from Swifton, Ark., signed for an estimated $37,500 — about a $9500 increase over what he got last year.

These were other developments of the day in the Tiger camp:

Kryhoski Signs Up

1. Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, who came to the Tigers this winter in a deal with the St. Louis Browns, rejected the terms the Tigers offered him today.

2. First Baseman Dick Kryhoski signed with the Tigers for what he called a "pretty fair increase" over the reported $5000 salary he got with the New York Yankees last year.

Priddy's failure to sign with the club today left him the only "regular" infield candidate whose name is not yet on the dotted line.

The Tigers gave more than $100,000 and Relief Pitcher Lou Kretlow to get Priddy from the Browns this winter.

He reportedly was the highest paid man on the Browns last year, drawing about $25,000.

He said that he discussed the situation with the Tiger management today but no further increase was offered him.

Tigers Offer Raise

The original offer the Tigers made me represented an advance over what I got in St. Louis last year, but I've had two good seasons and figure I am entitled to more," the new Tiger said.

He indicated that he and the ball club were only about $2500 apart on terms, but added, "neither one of us wants to give in on the thing."

Notre Dame's Frank Spaniel, the Redskins fifth-draft choice, yesterday became the first 1949 college player to sign a contract with the local pro club.

Army Breaks Off Boxing Relations With Maryland

Coach's 7-Year-Old Son Makes Sure He Has The Right Signals

Morgantown, W. Va., Feb. 7 (AP).—Art Lewis, named last night as West Virginia University head football coach, called his home in Parkersburg, W. Va., to tell the good news to to his family.

His 7-year-old son answered the phone.

"I've got the job as coach," Lewis said.

Miller's D.C. Judges Irk Cadet Coach

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Never again will the United States Military Acedemy send its boxing team to Maryland University—"We're through," declared Army Boxing Coach Herbert Kroeten yesterday.

"We'll honor our 1951 agreement that calls for a match with Maryland at West Point but that winds us up," said Kroeten. "After that, they're off our schedule. I didn't like the deal they gave us."

The break in relations stems from the Maryland victory in the dual match at College Park last Saturday night, 6½ to 1½, with the Army coach heatedly protesting both the decisions and the officials who worked the matches.

"We went down there to fight Maryland," Kroeten told The Washington Post by telephone, "and found that both judges and the referee worked for Heinie Miller, the Maryland coach, on the District Boxing Commission of which he is chairman. That's unfair to a visiting team."

Kroeten declared that "my boys won the first bout and the last three clearly, but the best we got was one decision and a draw."

He was unaware when he accepted Harry Volkman as the referee that "Volkman was a Marine Corps buddy of Miller," Kroeten said. "I knew he was attached to Miller's Boxing Commission, however."

Originally, only a referee was scheduled to officiate but friends of Kroeten's advised him to insist upon a pair of judges as well, he said. "We agreed on Charley Reynolds and Joe Bunsa. I learned later that they also worked for Miller's Boxing Commission as paid referees and judges."

In announcing his severance of relations with Maryland after the 1951 matches, Kroeten commented, "Other schools don't like the

Losty Gets 24 as C. U. Wins, 60-44

By West McLean

Western Maryland College came to town last night looking for another win over the only team that it has been able to beat in Mason-Dixon Conference play. Catholic University disappointed the visitors however, as the Cards won, 60-44.

Catholic now has a conference record of 4 wins against 7 losses while the Green Terrors have won only one conference game while losing seven. The only W. M. win was a 76-70 win over Catholic in Westminster, Md.

The Cardinals vaulted into a 18-9 lead in the first period and continued to roll it up. Jim Losty had 24 to take scoring honors for the night, barely edging out Western Maryland's Art Press, who had 22. Joe Della Ratta and Jim Balint also hit double figures for the Cards with 14 and 10 points.

Canisius Quits Football Because Of Money Losses

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 7 (AP).—Canisius College has decided to give up intercollegiate football, it was announced today.

The Very Rev. Raymond Schouten, S. J., president, cited heavy financial losses through the postwar years as the reason.

He also said another factor was the increasing difficulty of arranging schedules each year.

Clemson Drops Costly 66-61 Game to G. W.

Clemson, S. C., Feb. 7.—George Washington University handed Clemson a costly Southern Conference basketball defeat, 66-61, here tonight.

The fourth-place Colonials, already assured of a conference tournament berth, handed the eighth-place Tigers their fifth loss against five victories. The setback reduced Clemson's lead over ninth place Wake Forest to half-game. The top eight teams go to the big tournament March 3-4 at Raleigh, N. C.

Clemson was never closer than two points to G. W. nor was it further away than nine.

Five Colonials scored 10 or more points as they notched their tenth conference victory against three losses.

Jockey Injured In 3-Horse Spill

New Orleans, Feb. 7 (AP).—One jockey was seriously hurt and a horse destroyed in a three-horse spill in the third race at the Fair Grounds track here today.

Coming into the stretch "Miss Russell" fell throwing Jockey John Glisson and causing "Wise Policy" and "Adan" to fall.

Glisson was taken to Baptist Hospital where attaches said he suffered a broken collar bone and possible concussion. He had not regained consciousness at nightfall. Adan suffered a broken leg and was destroyed.

Maryland, Hoyas, Catholic Send Teams to Track Meet

Baltimore, Feb. 7.—Maryland, Georgetown and Catholic Universities are sending strong teams to tomorrow night's fourth annual 175th Regiment-South Atlantic Association Indoor Track Meet here.

Feature will be the 1-mile race which once again pits G-Man Fred Wilt against John Joe Barry, the Irish distance star, who is a freshman at Villanova. Barry finished behind Wilt both times they've met in the mile.

Catholic and Maryland will meet head-on in a special 2-mile race, with LaSalle and the Baltimore Olympic Club also participating.

Dick Peck, Larry Gaffney, Sam Lee and Dan Doyle will represent the Cardinals and Tyson Creamer, Gus Meier, Bob Browning and Bob Palmer the Terrapins.

Russ Johnson of Catholic and Dick Lentz and Bill Barnum of Maryland will be among the contestants in the high jump.

C. U.'s team of Kernan McCurnin, Jim Field, Andy Sesik and Doyle will be entered in the Mason-Dixon Conference mile relay.

Bob Thresher, the sensational 17-year-old sprinter from Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy is favored in the 70-yard dash. But pushing him will be Georgetown's Jim Fielding, Don Stonehouse, and Russ Doyle and Maryland's McGowan, George Burklin and Colin Timmis.

Bob Palmer of Maryland and Dave Smith and Carl Joyce of Georgetown are conceded only an outside chance of beating Seton Hall's Phil Thigpen in the half mile. The same holds true for Hoyas Pat O'Brien, Ray Dongelewicz, Johnny Lynch and George Michaliedes in the 600-yard run against Herb McKenley of Jamaica, George Rhoden of Morgan and George Guida of Penn State.

Georgetown also has varsity and freshman mile relay teams entered, plus hurdlers Bart Cooper and Bill Mitchell, and 1000-yard runner Jim Rams. Carrying Maryland's banner in the hurdles will be Karl Rubach. Salvanelli and Morty Cohen, 500-yard runner Bob Browning, and 1000-yard runners Meier, Jim Harris and Charlie Riley.

WILLIAMS—From P. 17

Ted Signs for $125,000

ers instead of you baseball guys."

Williams agreed he felt as good as he appeared.

Becoming serious for the first and only time during the interview, Williams touched on the club's 1950 chances.

"Our bad starts ruined us last year and the year before," he said. "Now we're going to play 18 of our first 22 games here in Fenway and if we have our usual home game successes, we're bound to get off to a flying start. And if we do that, we'll be up there all through the season."

Lanky Ted, whose teenish looks belie his 31 years, boasted that breaking up his off-season for his show appearances benefited him.

"I'm going to do something like this every year I'm in baseball," he said. "I thought fishing and hunting were a lot of fun but I'm really getting a big kick out of this new business."

"It did break up my Florida fishing but I'll fly back to the Everglades as soon as the New York show winds up on February 26 and that will give me about four more fishing days before I'm due in Sarasota, where my wife and daughter will be waiting for me," he said over his shoulder as he rushed to make the mechanics building matinee.

Walcott Fights KO Victim's Son

Philadelphia, Feb. 7 (AP).—Harold Johnson, high ranking Philadelphia light heavyweight, has the most important engagement of his brief fight career tomorrow night— a 10-round session with Jersey Joe Walcott at the Arena.

Johnson has piled up 29 victories in 30 professional fights but he never has met a man of the caliber of the 36-year-old Walcott.

There is a unique angle to the fight in that Walcott knocked out Johnson's father, Phil Johnson, 14 years ago. The elder Johnson now lives in Newark, N. J.

Ted About Even With Ruth's Net

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Ted Williams' new contract for a reported $125,000 tops the late Babe Ruth's best salary by $45,000. But the take-home pay for Williams in 1950 will come out just about even with Ruth's net salary for 1930 and 1931.

The gimmick is that little thing called income tax. Washington tax experts estimate that of the $125,000 salary, Williams will have about $70,000 left after paying Federal income tax.

On the other hand, based on 1930 and 1931 tax deductions, Ruth gave the Government only $10,513 of his 80 grand salary which still left him with $69,487, for each of those years.

Kiefer Far Back in AP Poll

Weissmuller, Tarzan to Kids, Is Century's Top Swimmer

By Bob Myers

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7 (AP).—The younger generation may have a dim knowledge that Johnny Weissmuller was a famous swimmer in his day, but the teen-agers of today best know him as a tree-climbing hero of the movie jungles.

Older heads, however, traced back over the pages of sports history and, in the Associated Press national poll, named Johnny Weissmuller as the greatest swimmer of the past 50 years.

Weissmuller received 132 votes, 30 more than the combined votes of all the other candidates, and 112 more votes than his nearest rival, newcomer Hironoshin Furuhashi of Japan. Third place went to Adolph Kiefer, 1930 backstroke king, with 11, and the great Duke Kahanamoku of Hawaii got third place with 10.

Weissmuller first heard the news of his selection via telephone while at a hospital at La Jolla south of here. He was there undergoing a routine physical check-up.

"Gee, that's swell. That sure is swell . . . ." For the moment, that was about all. Johnny is not famous for long speeches. As the screen's Tarzan for many years his lines were limited to a few caterwauls, and now as "Jungle Jim," a sort of Tarzan with clothes on, he still gives with more action than oration.

Physically, Weissmuller has changed little since his amateur days, or since he embarked on a pro career and came to Hollywood in 1931. This is truly remarkable because Weissmuller, now crowding the mid-40 mark, has tried and traversed most of the treacherous, tiring trails of this somewhat exacting place called Hollywood.

He was most proud, he said after a time to collect his memories, of the 67 records he held at one time, some 50 of which were of major importance and remained on the books for nearly two decades. He said he's lost track of them to some extent, "but they held up a long time," including the 51-second mark for 100 yards he set at Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1927.

Proud he was, too, of setting world records in winning the 100 and 400-meter free style events for America in the 1924 Olympic games at Paris, defeating in the 100 the great Duke Kahanamoku in 59 seconds.

And again, in the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam, it was Weissmuller's victory in the 100 meters and as anchor man for the relay team that won the title for Uncle Sam and staved off a fierce bid by Japan, Argentina and Sweden for top honors.

Champs Beat Howard, 52-44

North Carolina State College of Durham dumped Howard University, 52-44, last night at Uline Arena before a crowd of 2200 fans.

Howard, trailing by 28-19 at intermission, came back strong at the opening of the second half and quick baskets by Frank Booth and Jack Hunter and a foul toss by Booth made the score 30-24. That was the closest Howard came.

Ernie Warlick and Harry Taylor paced North Carolina State, defending Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association champions, with 20 and 16 points while Frank Booth was high for Howard with 11.

Honeywell Scares Landon But Loses

Little Honeywell school of Bethesda, barely able to split even in four games against junior varsity opposition, came within one point of upsetting the strong Landon varsity yesterday.

A 6-point Landon lead held out against Honeywell's late rush, and Landon won, 36-35, on the winner's court. Bill Coupland scored 11 points for Landon while John Souders had 16 for Honeywell. Landon's record is 7-4.

Aiken May Quit Postal Post to Enter Contest For Senate in Kansas

PAUL AIKEN may resign as Assistant Postmaster General to run for the Senate from Kansas on the Democratic ticket. His friends are putting the pressure on him to enter the race.

TREASURY: Improved administration in this department over the past 3½ years has served the taxpayers about 56 million dollars. Secretary Snyder yesterday told Congress that the major improvements had been made in Revenue, Customs, Engraving and Printing, Coast Guard, Fiscal Service and the Mint.

BONDS: A subcommittee headed by Representative Karsten (D., Mo.) is about ready to agree on a bill to wipe out or reduce substantially the premiums the 600,000 Federal workers must pay on their surety bonds.

CAPITOL HILL: The House has approved two Murray bills, one to give rural carriers credit for past service toward longevity promotions, and the other would give custodial employes credit since 1933 toward the raises.

This is calendar day in the House, and Chairman Murray of the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee is slated to be recognized. Murray may call up these bills: (1) To provide survivorship annuities without cost to employes who retired prior to April 1, 1948, and (2) to boost postal rates an estimated 130 million dollars annually.

OVERTIME: Chairman Lesinski of the House Labor Committee is writing a bill to require Uncle Sam to pay full time and a half to his employes who work more than 40 hours a week. The Administration is making a study of the various overtime pay laws and it may propose a measure of its own.

DEFINITION: David Kandel of 1216 New York ave. nw., wrote this description of an "Office Pest:"

They wear diamonds that shine like lamps
And display coats of mink
Yet they 'borrow" all your postage stamps
And siphon out your ink.

NOTES: Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) has in a bill to set up a small business coordinator on the White House staff. The coordinator would be paid $15,000 annually to help get Federal contracts for small businessmen . . . The Coast Guard is revamping its accounting system in cooperation with both Treasury and General Accounting . . . Civil Service's retirement division is out with a new question-and-answer booklet on your retirement problems. You can get a copy either through your personnel office or by writing the division.

LABOR: A bill backed by big labor groups and supported in advance by many members of Congress will be introduced in Congress soon to transfer the Vocational Rehabilitation Agency from the Federal Security Agency to the Labor Department.

PAY BILL: The Johnston bill to boost the salaries of postmasters and supervisors was given a friendly hearing yesterday on Capitol Hill.

Though openly sympathetic with the bill, Deputy Postmaster General Vincent Burke testified that regardless of how meritorious the legislation might be, the department would withhold approval of it until postal rates are boosted.

Burris Jackson, president of the National Association of Postmasters, pointed out that the series of flat pay boosts to postmasters and employes alike had thrown the pay of postmasters and others in positions of responsibility out of line.

Members of the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee were impressed by the testimony of Jackson and others who explained that in many offices clerks and carriers were paid more than postmasters and supervisors. Chairman Johnston (D., S. C.), author of the bill, expects swift committee approval of the legislation. The bill would fix postmaster and supervisor salaries on the basis of receipts in the 40,000 offices. The postmasters at New York and Chicago, for example, would be boosted to $17,000 each.

Mrs. Keleher Tells Court Husband Is Rich Gambler

Cross-Country Bets Bringing Large Profit To Mate Described In Suit for Divorce

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher renewed her District Court fight yesterday to prove that her estranged husband, John B. (Dapper Jack) Keleher, is a wealthy and influential gambler.

The 51-year-old Mrs. Keleher is suing before Judge Charles F. McLaughlin for a limited divorce on the grounds of cruelty. Keleher, 67, charges desertion and wants an absolute divorce.

Overtones of cross-country gaming and betting "layoffs" via telephone were immediately interjected into the trial.

Mrs. Keleher said that "my husband," who made as much as $300,000 a year, had been going with Mrs. Dorothy Blake, his companion, from racetrack to racetrack during the past few years.

Calls Identified

Also, a four-inch high stack of long-distance telephone calls was identified as coming from Mrs. Blake's 2480 16th st. nw. apartment.

An initially-unsuccessful attempt was made to show that many of these calls, most of them to Passaic, N. J., and Kerrville, Tex., may have gone to Frank Erickson, often tagged the country's richest bookmaker, and to a man identified only as John L. Sullivan—not the former Navy Secretary.

It is the second court round for the Kelehers. In January, 1949, Judge Edward A. Tamm threw out Mrs. Keleher's divorce suit but awarded her $100 a week maintenance.

She testified yesterday that she is deep in debt, has a spot on her lung and can't pay for medical treatment, has pawned $80,000 in jewels, lost her telephone because of nonpayment, and is threatened with eviction.

Mrs. Blake in Court

Keleher came to the court ruddy from the Southern sun and with the trim-figured Mrs. Blake, his "constant" companion, on his arm.

Mrs. Keleher' counsel, James J. Laughlin, told the court that he would show that almost up to this "very day" Keleher has been making large sums from gambling.

Laughlin said that through Mrs. Blake, Keleher has been telephoning his betting business over the country. Mrs. Blake made most of the calls, Laughlin said, but Keleher paid for them.

Retort by Attorney

Then, Keleher's attorney, Alvin L. Newmyer, said he would prove that Mrs. Keleher had nothing new to offer, and that the issues had been adjudicated before Judge Tamm. Newmyer offered to prove that in 1946, Mrs. Keleher locked Keleher from her Woodley Park Towers apartment, and that this constituted desertion.

Mrs. Keleher took the witness stand to say that she married Keleher in 1926, helped him in his business—gambling and occasionally real estate speculation—and that he left her for Mrs. Blake.

She said Keleher cut off her support when she filed an alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Blake in 1948. Asked to identify Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Keleher said:

"She is a woman who has been constantly going with my husband. She travels all over the country with him."

Later Laughlin called to the stand a representative of Western Union who testified that between 1945 and 1947 a "high speed ticker" was connected to 3205 Rhode Island ave., Mt. Rainer, Md., and listed to "Jack Keleher." However, the bills were paid, he said, by Howard Sports Daily, a racing service.

Judge McLaughlin adjourned court until 10 a. m. today.

Flames Kill Navy Worker In Alexandria

James R. Brownlee Burned to Death As Fire Sweeps Home

A man identified as James R. Brownlee, 36, was burned to death last night when fire gutted his frame home in Chinquapin Village, Alexandria.

Brownlee was said to be an employe of the Naval Ordnance plant in Alexandria. He was alone in the house at the time, police said.

The fire was at 238 Chinquapin Village, near the 3200 block of King st. The Alexandria fire department received the first report of the blaze at 10:31 p. m.

Brownlee's body could not be removed until the flames were put out. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner.

Alexandria Police Pvt. James Mason, 27, of 97 Chinquapin Village, tried to rush in to rescue Brownlee but was forced back by the flames.

Bar Group Backs Marital Counsel Plan

Judge Edward A. Tamm yesterday disclosed a plan to streamline divorce and custody actions in District Court by the use of a Marital Affairs Counsel.

The project, which calls for action by Congress to set up a new office at the court, was immediately given approval "in principle" by the District Bar Association Committee on Relations with the Domestic Relations Commissioner.

The Marital Affairs Counsel staff, which may prove self-supporting, will afford the court, Judge Tamm believes, the service of an "impersonal, trained investigative staff to supply factual data . . . relating to custody of minor children and maintenance and alimony payments."

The counsel and his 15-man office will have the power to apply to the court for subpena, will have litigants testify under oath and will collect maintenance and alimony payments directly from husbands for disbursement to wives and children. All of these features and also statutory authorization—are now lacking in the Domestic Relations office of the court, according to Judge Tamm.

In his report, the judge writes that now:

"The bitterness, emotional tension and feeling between litigants in domestic relations matters makes it difficult and often impossible for the litigants' attorneys or the court to receive uncolored and unexaggerated evidence in these matters."

He studied a similar plan adopted in Detroit, and obtained the approval of the court here.

"The plan," he said, "will afford the court accurate factual information concerning environment, moral character of custodial claimants, condition of the home and other essentials for determination of questions relating to the custody of the minor children of parents seeking separation or divorce.

"This procedure will enable the court to more accurately adjudicate these matters in the interest of the too-often forgotten litigants in domestic relations cases — the minor children who are, unfortunately, the ultimate losers in the litigation."

Trade Board Bucks Home Rule, Asks D. C. Unit in Congress

The Washington Board of Trade will begin an extensive campaign to secure national representation for the District rather than any form of local suffrage, it was announced last night.

Maurice J. Nee, chairman of the board's committee on form of government, said the board has stopped being merely "agin" the Kefauver and Auchincloss measures calling for home rule and will actively support the Neely and Teague proposals to amend the constitution to call for election of Senators and Congressmen from the District.

Nee spoke on the subject, "Why Home Rule for Washington?" at a meeting of the Palisades Citizens Association at the Palisades Field House, Dana and Sherrier pls. nw.

His opponent, Dr. George B. Galloway, Library of Congress specialist who helped frame the Kefauver and Auchincloss bills, declared the board's proposal was "putting the cart before the horse." Local suffrage should take precedence, he said.

In discussing the question, Galloway said the Kefauver bill would relieve Congress of the burden of handling District affairs during "these perilous times" when all their attention should be given to national and international affairs.

It also would modernize the outmoded structure of the District government, he said, and restore local suffrage to the people after a lapse of 78 years.

More than 80 members of the association were present for the discussion. Gordon Atherholt, past president of the association, acted as moderator.

Metropolis View

Upon appeal for help by the mothers' club of Edgewood Playground, the Metropolis View Citizens Association voted to petition Congress again to provide funds for the enclosure of the playground's patio.

The meeting in the Noyes School also adopted a resolution by John Tondra endorsing the McMillan bill to give the District Commissioners control of swimming pools and playgrounds, and one by Albert E. Yateman asking that Central High be kept white.

Columbia Heights

Senator Matthew M. Neely's backing of the proposed shift of Cardozo High School students to Central High School was "resented" last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

"We believe the Senator should confine his activities to the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee and leave the school problem to the residents of Washington who spend their money and who actually studied the facts," the group said in a resolution.

The 52 persons present at the meeting in the Columbia Heights Christian Church hall also voted to oppose extension of rent control and indorsed the proposal to do away with the personal property tax on household goods.

Cleveland Park

A resolution urging the retention of Central High as a school for white students was passed last night by the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association, meeting at Hearst School, 37th and Tilden sts. nw.

The group also plans to ask for installation of "no thru street" signs at Tilden and 37th sts. and in the 3500 block of Albemarle st. nw.

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, spoke at the meeting on the benefits of citizen participation in government.

Meridian Hill

Abolition of the personal property tax and transfer of students from Cardozo to Central High School were proposals adopted last night by the Meridian Hill Civic Association.

The group met at the Wilson Elementary School, 17th and Euclid sts. nw. More than 35 members were present.

Plan to Amend Hatch Act Hit

The Arlington County Civic Federation last night reiterated its opposition to a proposed Hatch Act amendment which would permit Federal workers to take part in party politics on the local level.

Approved by a voice vote, the resolution stated that the amendment will only "confuse, confound and make uncertain" the rights of Federal employes.

It was presented jointly to the group by Harley Williams, of the local government committee, and James Franklin, of the legislative and legal action committee.

The federation also approved a resolution asking the County Board to advertise its proposed master zoning plan and hold another hearing on it before adoption of the plan, now scheduled for February 25.

In other actions the federation:

1. Recommended that the county planning commission be enlarged from five to seven members to secure "a better balance between different types of economic interests," and that the county manager and one member of the county board and the county school board be included as ex-officio members.

2. Recommended that the 75-acre Fort Reynolds tract be given priority for purchase as a county recreation center. The site borders on the Shirley hwy. near the Fairlington and Abingdon schools.

Interference Charge Denied By Park Unit

Really Meant to Ask For Bridge Restudy, Wurster Letter Says

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission resolution vetoing building of any new bridge now across the Anacostia did not mean what it said, District Commissioners were told yesterday.

Latest chapter in the two-week-old bridge squabble between the Commissioners and NCPPC was a letter from NCPPC Chairman William W. Wurster.

Released by NCPPC yesterday, it answered the Commissioners' letter of January 30, which contended NCPPC should not have assigned priorities to District projects by flatly stating bottlenecks at existing bridges must be cleared before another one is built.

Wurster explained NCPPC had intended to supersede this resolution by one passed the next day which asked the Commissioners to restudy the need for bridges across the river.

His interpretation of the meaning of the two resolutions taken together, Wurster said, was that a study of the bridge needs should be made "and, as a part of this study, a review of the effect which the removal of one or more bottlenecks on existing bridges might have . . . ."

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, who had argued for a bridge at East Capitol st., said he was "happy to hear Dean Wurster had a different thing in mind. But I don't think we can be blamed for taking the resolution at its face value. I assume it will be revised at the Commission's next meeting."

Wurster's letter got in a dig at the Commissioners for deciding on the East Capitol st. site before NCPPC had a chance to vote on it.

The two agencies wouldn't be "in the position they are" had NCPPC not "unnecessarily" been placed in the position of reviewing an action of the Commissioners, he said. NCPPC should, instead, take part in such projects in the planning stage, Wurster said, and make recommendations "prior to the decision by the administrative agency, which has the final responsibility."

Reporter Hits Another Home Story

Reporters are supposed to pursue stories, but with Merlin Johnson it works just the opposite.

About 18 months ago, his reporter instincts in high gear, he chased some fire engines. The race ended at 1819 M st. nw. The fire was in Johnson's third-floor apartment.

Early yesterday, at about 3:15 a. m., Johnson and his wife, Olive, were awakened in their M st. apartment when a prowler bumped against their bed. They screamed.

The prowler grabbed up the shoes he had removed and fled down a fire escape.

A few minutes later, Police Pvt. Paul L. McEwan of the Third Precinct, who was in plain clothes, saw a man running in the 1200 block of 18th st. nw. What's more, the man had on only one shoe.

In Municipal Court yesterday, McEwan told Judge Walter J. Casey that the suspect, Maurice N. Whittington, 23, no fixed address, had admitted breaking into the Johnson apartment.

Johnson is a reporter for the Times-Herald.

Assault Charges Are Nolle Prossed

Simple assault charges lodged against Louis F. Sommers, 49, of 714 C st. se., yesterday were nolle prossed in Municipal Court.

Sommers was arrested January 5 after three persons complained he had poked an object in their backs and demanded money. Sommers denied the charge.

Carey Girl Holding Own In Coma Fight

Patricia Anne Carey was last night reported holding her own in her fight between coma and consciousness.

The eight-year-old daughter of James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, suffered severe head injuries 33 days ago when struck by an automobile at Sligo ave. and Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Monday, for the first time, she opened her eyes, sat up in her bed at Washington Sanitarium, smiled, and apparently unseeingly responded to her doctor's demands. She has not regained consciousness in the true sense of the word, her mother said yesterday. Nor has she spoken since she was struck en route to St. Michael's school no January 5.

Workmen yesterday set up traffic light standards at the accident intersection. Neighborhood families had asked for the traffic lights months before, and their plea was renewed after the Carey girl was struck.

Attorney Ford Enters Guilty Plea To Parking Charge

Charles E. Ford, Washington criminal attorney, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of overtime parking.

"I've known this defendant for more than 25 years," remarked Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott as Ford faced him. "Perhaps I should disqualify myself."

"You won't have to, Your Honor," Ford stated. "I'm pleading guilty."

Scott, with a smile, suggested an investigation by probation authorities. He dropped the idea when Assistant Corporation Counsel Phillip Brophy commented that Ford had probably been unable to move his car in time from in front of his office, 416 5th st. nw. due to the press of "official business."

Ford was released on personal bond under promise not to repeat the offense.

Bazelon Is Confirmed By Senate Committee

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of David L. Bazelon as judge for the United States Court of Appeals here.

The nomination of Charles F. McLaughlin to the same bench, and James R. Kirkland to District Court, still are pending before the committee. All these recipients of recess appointments must receive Senate confirmation.

'No Quorum' Dismisses Neely Group

The Senate District Committee, meeting for the first time in this six-week-old session of Congress, folded up yesterday in eight minutes.

No quorum, no business.

Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), a stickler for punctuality, ordered the meeting postponed at 11:08 a. m. when only 4 of the 13 members had arrived for the 11 a. m. call.

The West Virginia Senator has been beset with quorum difficulties on the Senate's local affairs since he became chairman last fall. Twice he postponed scheduled meetings in a huff when fewer than seven Senators failed to appear within three and four minutes after the appointed hour.

"I just don't see any sense in this procedure," Neely told reporters yesterday. "If we can't come to the meetings on time, it is not fair for those who are here. I do not intend to wait 5, 10 or 15 minutes."

In addition to the chairman, the three members on hand before yesterday's 11:08 postponement order, and thus absolved from Neely's dressing-down, were: Senators Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Harry Darby (R., Kans.).

Neely said he would make another attempt to call a full committee meeting Monday morning. "I am willing to be here at 5 in the afternoon, or midnight or at any time we can have a quorum," he added.

The chairman had hoped yesterday's meeting would assign members to subcommittees and take up pending bills to limit the number of D. C. taxicabs, revise local insurance laws, and a measure to establish a human rights commission for the District.

A poll of absentee committee members showed that conflicting committee meetings and an unusually heavy influx of constituents had detained them.

Meanwhile, Senator Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.), chairman of a special subcommittee studying tax-exempt property here, said he hopes his group can meet at 11 a. m. today.

Item for Bridge First to Go in Committee Slash Of Record Total

The District's record-breaking $119,200,000 budget for the 1951 fiscal year has been slashed about 6 million dollars, Capitol sources reported yesterday.

The House Subcommittee on District Appropriations finished "marking up" the supply bill two days ago for submission to an executive committee of eight members of the full House Appropriations group.

What Pruners Did

According to reports, the House economy effort took its chief toll in this manner:

1. The two-million-dollar item to start the proposed bridge across the Anacostia River has been withheld until the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission can get together on where the span should be located. The commissioners think East Capitol st. is the best site, while NCPPC is holding out for a Massachusetts ave. location.

2. A down-the-line pruning in most municipal department programs, but with a particularly light hand on schools, health and welfare departments.

Capital Improvements

3. A 15-percent across-the-board reduction on contract authorizations for capital improvements. The commissioners asked a total authorization of $8,732,150.

There also were indications that the Sewer Department program was trimmed.

Funds for school teachers' salaries were carefully scrutinized, and provisions were made for hiring additional Negro teachers in the District school system, it was reported.

Present size of the District spending program is a long way from final. The estimates must go through the full House Appropriations Committee, the House and then over to the Senate, where cuts often are restored, in whole or part.

PHA to Act In Greenbelt Budget Crisis

The Public Housing Administration last night promised to complete its review of the Greenbelt, Md., city budget by the weekend to avert a threatened disruption in city services.

The Greenbelt City Council Monday night ordered all municipal services, except police and fire protection, cut off next Wednesday unless PHA funds arrived by then.

The city asked PHA for $182,634 for operations during the calendar year 1950. This payment, plus the city's share of State revenues—expected to amount to $43,049—finances the city services. This year's request is $7000 higher than last year's budget.

A spokesman for PHA, landlord of the Federally owned community, put the blame for the funds tieup on the City Council, charging that the body failed to submit its budget by November 1, as requested by PHA. The budget arrived on December 28, he said.

Each year, PHA studies the city budget and then negotiates with the council on how much taxes to pay for its 1875 tenants. Last year, in this way, PHA cut $8000 off the city request. After the budget is agreed on, PHA makes its payment.

City Manager Charles T. McDonald, who prepares the budget, said it was submitted "informally" in November and a council-approved version went to the agency on December 20.

Dougherty To Direct Information

The Washington Post

WILLIAM J. DOUGHERTY

. . . a veteran newspaperman

William J. Dougherty, longtime Government public relations man and former newspaperman, was yesterday appointed director of information of the Interior Department.

Dougherty, who has been acting director since last September, succeeds Carlton Skinner, who became Governor of Guam. The appointment marks the completion of almost 13 years of Government service by Dougherty.

Now 56, he entered the Federal service in March 1936 as regional director of the Works Progress Administration at Wilkes-Barre, Pa. A year later he was named the first information director of the National Bituminous Coal Commission and when that agency became part of Interior he was assigned to the consumers' counsel division.

Interior loaned him to the Office of Emergency Management for six months to set up the Philadelphia regional information office. Later he helped organize the field service of OEM, which became the field division of the Office of War Information. Dougherty was made associate director of the division.

In 1944, he returned to Interior as information chief for the Solid Fuels Administration and three years later was named assistant director of information for Interior.

Before entering Government, Dougherty worked for the Associated Press in Pittsburgh and New York and the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader. Later he became public relations director for the Pennsylvania State Highway Commission.

He lives at 3722 Livingston st. nw., Chevy Chase.

Police Court Moves

The Falls Church police court, which has been holding its weekly Tuesday morning session in the police station, yesterday moved to new quarters at City Hall on North Washington st.

The widow of a White House chauffeur who worked more than 7000 overtime hours without pay would receive $7009.53 under a bill passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

She is Mrs. Beulah White, of 1318 Delafield pl. nw., whose husband, John E. White, died last December 23 at the age of 75. White had chauffeured for Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The overtime plus night differential is claimed for the period between August 1, 1935, and August 1, 1940. A House Judiciary Committee shows the overtime amounts to 7744 hours.

White did not learn until 1948 it was necessary to file a claim for the money. By that time, because of the statute of limitations, the General Accounting Office could pay him only $359.61.

Jury Upholds Covenant on Building Sale

A six-year-old covenant increasing the purchase price of a building if it were turned to other than religious use was upheld yesterday by an Arlington County jury although the building has been resold since.

The Rev. Francis J. Lukens was awarded $4820 in his Circuit Court suit against Talmage Wilcher, Arlington real estate broker.

Mr. Lukens contended Wilcher violated a covenant in the original deed of the building at 1738 Wilson blvd. by turning it into an office building.

Wilcher bought the building for $23,000 in 1945 from Rev. Charles O. Benham.

Mr. Benham had bought it in 1944 from Mr. Lukens for $20,000, minus $4820. The convenant contained a condition that the building be used for religious purposes and that if the property should ever be converted "wholly" to other than religious purposes the $4820 would be paid.

Wilcher's attorney, Anna Hedrick, argued that Mr. Lukens should be suing Mr. Benham rather than Wilcher. The defense noted an appeal.

Proposed Charter For Falls Church Draws Opposition

The proposed new Falls Church charter was ready for submission to the State Legislature at Richmond yesterday following a "last" change in the document which was approved last Friday night in revised form by the City Council.

At a brief special meeting this Monday, the council made one additional change which would provide that the city's power to make an unlimited temporary loan in the event of annexation would expire after January 1, 1955.

Meanwhile, charter opponents, about 50 of whom met Monday night at the home of Falls Church Former Mayor John F. Bethune, were circulating petitions asking that the Legislature turn down the charter.

Home Building Head Derides Housing Bill

Administrator Raymond M. Foley of the Housing and Home Finance Agency was offered $5000—on a one-sided bet, the proceeds to go to a favored charity—by the president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington yesterday.

The bet concerns the "middle income" housing bill Administrator Foley champions to spur building programs by cooperatives. Home Builders' president, Clarke Daniel, doesn't champion the bill at all. His group regards it as rank socialism.

Daniel told a late afternoon meeting of the organization that the $5000 stands for his conviction that no co-op, even with Government backing, can build as good a home as cheaply as Daniel's private enterprise-sponsored Standard Properties, Inc.

Foley last night had said: "No comment."

Those specifications Daniel says he is incorporating into a project of $8000 rambler-type homes at Kensington, Md., include:

Two bedrooms, fully equipped kitchen, automatic washing machine, built-in radio, magnetic catches for cabinets, dish spray, heat lamp in bathroom, sliding steel closet doors and automatic forced warm air heat.

Safety Council Is Launched In Alexandria

The first steps toward formation of an Alexandria Safety Council were taken last night at a meeting in Alexandria attended by about 40 representatives of civic clubs, business organizations and city officials.

Peyton M. Luckett, president of the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce which first advocated the council, was elected temporary chairman of the organization committee and a steering committee and bylaws committee were named. The organizing group will meet again Tuesday night, February 21.

Dr. Siebens to Speak

Dr. Arthur R. Siebens, pastor of the American Church in Berlin, Germany, will speak at a church night program in National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., following a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Thursday.

New Road Link To Be Asked In Mt. Rainier

The Mount Rainier Town Council last night indorsed a petition asking the Prince Georges County Commissioners to construct a direct road link between Queenstown and Mount Rainier and Brentwood.

The work would involve extending Arundel rd. from 30th to 34th st. and building a bridge over a creek.

Initiated by interested civic groups, the petition will begin circulating among Mount Rainier residents today.

The council also decided to ask the management of the Sidney Lust Cameo Theater at 34th st. and Rhode Island ave., to remove a marquee which endangers tall trucks driving close to the curb.

Two new policemen, Charles J. Burke, 31, of 2714 Kirkwood pl., Hyattsville, and Charles J. Buddington, 28, of 4503 31st st., Mount Rainier, were sworn in and put on six months' probation. The force has six full-time policemen.

Mayor Herbert W. Reichelt announced city expenditures in the past two weeks amounted to $4069. The next meeting of the council, which under its regular schedule would fall on February 21, will be held a day earlier in the City Hall.

Clarence Seage Dies on Bridge He Helped Build

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 7 (U.P.)—Clarence E. Seage, 61, nationally known structural engineer and designer, died in an ambulance on San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, one of the spans he helped plan and build.

Mr. Seage was stricken yesterday during a conference with Col. Ralph Tudor, chief engineer for the bridge authority, and was being taken to a hospital in the ambulance when he died.

Born in Staten Island, N. Y., Seage was credited with aiding in the design of the Hell Gate bridge in New York; McNary dam on the Columbia River and drew up plans for the projected span across the Columbia at the Dalles.

Survivors include his wife, Faye, a sister, Mrs. Harry Reinecke and a brother, Walter J. Seage. Funeral services will be held Thursday in Oakland.

E. H. Lawrence

Man Stalled By Rationing Of Gas Dies

Edgar H. Lawrence, retired engineer who had made his home in Washington since World War II when he ran out of gas coupons on a pleasure trip from New York to Florida, died yesterday in Washington Sanitarium after a long illness.

His widow, Mrs. Gertrude P. Lawrence, said Mr. Lawrence was too ill to continue the trip when gas became available after the war. He lived at the Continental Hotel.

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Lawrence was in charge of engineering and architectural work in the building of the Hecht Co. department store at 7th and F sts. nw., in 1925. He also worked with Frank Lloyd Wright on the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo.

Born in Philadelphia, Mr. Lawrence received his degree in civil engineering at the University of Pennsylvania, and a degree in architecture at the University of Illinois.

From 1900 to 1906, Mr. Lawrence was in charge of engineering at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. In World War I, he was a design engineer for the Dupont Co., in Wilmington, Del.

It was as a representative of the Jarvis Hunt Co. of Chicago that Mr. Lawrence took charge of the engineering work on The Hecht Co. building in 1925.

A charter member of the University Club, Mr. Lawrence also belonged to Annapolis Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Besides his widow, Mr. Lawrence is survived by a brother, Frank W. Lawrence, New York City.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Thursday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be private.

Bishop Murphy Of Michigan Dies

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 7 (U.P.)—Bishop William Francis Murphy, 64, spiritual leader of more than 100,000 northwestern Michigan Catholics, died today at his Saginaw home after a long illness.

Bishop Murphy, a native of Kalamazoo, Mich., was appointed by the late Pope Pius I in 1938 when the 16-county Saginaw diocese was formed.

The only son in a family of 10 children, the bishop is survived by four of his nine sisters. They are: Sister Mary Lucille at Dowagiac, Mother Mary de Chantal in Detroit, and Mary A. and Elizabeth Murphy, who kept his house here for many years.

Hugo Herfurth Dies; Building Contractor

Mr. Herfurth

Mr. Herfurth attended Alexandria schools, Georgetown University and received his doctorate in juridical science from National University Law School in 1929. He was a member of the District and Virginia Bar Associations and of Delta Kappa fraternity.

Heading the firm that bore his name, Mr. Herfurth had offices in Washington and Alexandria and worked on several Government projects. He was once associated with the late Harry Wardman.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Betty S. Herfurth; three daughters, Mrs. Helen M. Adams, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Dorothy L. Shanholtz, Washington, and Mrs. Irene F. Graham, Arlington, and a son, Hugo F. Herfurth, 3d, Washington.

Other survivors include three brothers, George S. Herfurth, Washington; Oscar G. Herfurth, Norfolk, and Paulus O. Herfurth, Alexandria, and two sisters, Mrs. Pauline B. Walters, Miami, Fla., and Mrs. Elsie H. Snyder, Alexandria, and seven grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held in the Demaine Funeral Home, 520 S. Washington st., Alexandria, at 1 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery, Alexandria.

Mr. Herfurth's family requested that flowers be omitted and the money sent to the Alexandria Chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Carlsen, Lutheran Church Leader, Dies

Blair, Nebr., Feb. 7 (U.P.)—Dr. Neils Christian Carlsen, president of the United Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, died in his home last night.

His death was attributed to a heart attack. He was 65.

Dr. Carlsen, a native of Denmark, had been president of the church since 1925. He was a member of the executive committee of the American Lutheran Conference, and was a delegate to the Lutheran World Conference at Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1929.

Mrs. Edmonds, Relief Group Aide, Dies

Funeral services for Mrs. Gladys S. Edmonds, 60, president of the Department of the Potomac of the Women's Relief Corps, will be held at 12:30 p. m. today in Lee's funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Edmonds

Mrs. Edmonds died Sunday at the George Washington University Hospital of internal hemorrhaging. She lived at 335 34th pl. ne.

She was the wife of Charles A. Edmonds, a marine engineer in the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships for the past 34 years.

A native of Indianapolis, Ind., Mrs. Edmonds moved to Garrett Park, Md., at the age of 15. She lived in Washington for the past 10 years.

Active in Women's Relief Corps, Mrs. Edmonds was recently installed as president of its Department of the Potomac.

14 Seized in Series Of Housebreakings

Washington and Montgomery County police yesterday announced a sweeping cleanup of recent housebreakings with the arrest of 14 men and boys ranging from 11 to 36 in age.

In the District, police claimed the arrest of 11 persons had solved about 30 housebreakings.

In Montgomery County, three juveniles, ages 11 to 14, were arrested and police there said they are implicated in 17 housebreakings. in the past two months County police said two other juveniles, whose names are known, are also involved and will be picked up.

All of the arrests in the District were made by precinct men.

Four in Third Precinct

A gang of four was rounded up in the Third Precinct, five teenagers were arrested in the First Precinct, and two more suspects were picked up by the Thirteenth Precinct.

The first break came when Detective Mahlon E. Pitts of the Third Precinct received a tip that some stolen goods were in a house at 520 20th st. nw.

In a room there, he arrested Savannah Smarr, 36, of 418 20th st. nw., and Sterling Penn, 27, of 518 Ricketts ct. nw., and recovered a quantity of stolen cigarettes and meat.

After questioning Smarr and Penn, police picked up Ernest Cephas, jr., 20, of 533 21st st. nw., and Charles Anthony, 19, of 835 5th st. ne.

Police said Penn confessed to three housebreakings and Smarr to one, but that Cephas and Anthony denied any complicity.

Tells of Housebreakings

Police said they believe the four are involved in at least seven other housebreakings.

Penn, according to police, told of twice breaking into a grocery store at 1913 E st. nw., on Saturday and again on Monday, and the housebreaking of a grocery store, at 2101 Virginia ave. nw., on February 1.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence set bond of $4500 each for Penn and Cephus, $3000 for Anthony, and $1500 for Smarr and continued their hearing until today.

Capt. Howard V. Covell of the First Precinct announced the arrest of five teen-age boys believed involved in 19 housebreakings since last October.

Covell said Pvts. Clarence S. Muse and Albert G. Fielder arrested two 16-year-old boys Monday night after they had broken into the Open Door Restaurant, 1412 I st. nw.

Name Three Others

They named three other boys as members of their gang, one 15, one 16, and one 17. The other three were picked up yesterday. Covell said the boys have admitted breaking into 19 business establishments in town. They were held for action of juvenile authorities.

The Thirteenth Precinct contributed two arrests. Sergt. Charles B. Kimball was walking in the 1500 block of U st. nw. at 12:50 a. m. yesterday when he saw a 17-year-old boy trying to break into a Safeway store.

After his arrest, the boy identified Jack M. Mincle, 22, of 1305 9th st. nw., as his partner. Both were charged with housebreaking.

Action against the boy will be left with juvenile authorities. Mincle was arraigned in Municipal Court, his case continued and he was held in $1500 bond.

Montgomery County police at Bethesda yesterday picked up three boys, ranging in age from 11 to 14, and tied them in with 17 recent Bethesda housebreakings.

County police said the trio named two other boys who have taken part in the series of housebreakings. They will also be picked up, police said.

The boys have admitted taking more than $200 in cash and several watches, according to police, and snatching coins from the Mile of Dimes collection boxes on store counters.

2 Beat, Rob Professor

A University of Michigan faculty member, here on business, was beaten and robbed of $125 by two young hitch-hikers he gave a lift Monday night.

The victim, Henry Barnes, 42, of Ann Arbor, Mich., was in good condition last night at Arlington Hospital with multiple head and face injuries.

Barnes said he picked up the youths at Constitution ave. and 25th st. nw., after they told him they wanted to go to Bethesda. En route, he said, they forced him to drive out Route 604 to Langley, Va. At a dirt road nearby they attacked him.

He said after taking the money and his watch, the pair drove off in his car. The auto was found abandoned in a ditch a short distance away.

Barnes gave his Washington address as a tourist home at 5027 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Virginia Gets Doctors Reciprocity Bill

Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 7.—The Senate Committee on Interstate Cooperation today reported the Fenwick bill to permit District of Columbia doctors to treat patients in Virginia on payment of a $1 license fee.

A similar measure, to permit "borderline reciprocity" between Virginia doctors and those in nearby States and the District has been introduced in the House of Delegates by J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, of Arlington.

Proposed by Fenwick

The Senate bill was proposed by Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington. It now goes to the floor of the upper chamber.

The Senate today passed the bill proposed by Senator Andrew W. Clarke, of Alexandria, to require real estate agents to keep in escrow all deposits made by property buyers. It would prevent agents from intermingling such deposits with any funds of their own.

Senator Fenwick introduced two bills in the Senate. One would permit appointment of substitute election judges and clerks by county electoral boards when such regular officials are unable to serve. The second would permit appointment by boards of a nonmember to be present when election ballots are printed.

Another bill offered in the Senat was sponsord by Senator E. O. McCue of Charlottesville.

It would make it a criminal offense for a person to falsify or wilfully fail to file State income tax returns. Penalties would range from one to five years in the penitentiary, and/or a fine not to exceed $5000 on conviction.

Two Truckers Jailed 5 Days For Overloads

Savage, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—The State has resorted to jail sentences in its crackdown on truck drivers caught violating highway load limits.

A Florida truck driver recently served a five-day term and today a Virginian, Henry Lee Stanley, received a similar sentence.

Stanley appealed and is free on $500 bond. The driver for the Waite Lumber Co. of Thornburg, Va., was charged with overloading his vehicle by 7½ tons.

He was picked up at the Road Commission weighing station at the Waterloo State Police Barracks, where vehicles traveling the busy Washington-Baltimore boulevard are checked.

Magistrate J. Edwin Haslup imposed the jail term.

The same magistrate sentenced Norman T. Riddick of Dade City, Fla., who also was caught in a spot check on the Washington-Baltimore road. That was on January 23.

Haslup observed at that time that truck firms pay little attention to fines. The overweight law provides for fines up to $100 and jail terms up to 10 days.

Takoma Park College Gets Radio Station

The Washington Missionary College, a Seventh Day Adventist school in Takoma Park, Md., yesterday announced the opening of its new 25-watt radio station WAFT.

The new station, which will have a broadcast radius of a quarter of a mile over 670 kilocycles, will be used to teach students all phases of radio broadcasting.

Built at a cost of $10,000, the station will broadcast four hours each day, covering the morning, noon, and evening periods. About 5000 records have been procured for the station's record library.

Professor G. Fletcher Tarr, head of the college's speech and radio department, will teach the new radio courses.

Uncle George Might Arrange Audience

Sub-Deb Off to Addis Ababa

By Ellen Buell Parry

WE WONDER whether George R. Merrell, our United States Ambassador to Ethiopia, will arrange for his niece, Julia Merrell, to be presented to His Excellency, Haile Selassie.

ELLEN PARRY

Julie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Merrell of McLean, Va., sailed yesterday from New York on the S. S. Exeter, with the Misses Goodwin (Alice and Katharine) of Washington, for Alexandria. She will go from there to Cairo to visit Cornelius Van Engert and his daughter, Shelia, also of Washington. Next she will board a plane for Addis Ababa, to visit her uncle, George Merrell. He hopes to take her later to Rome to visit her aunt, Miss Ruth Merrell, and then on to France.

Julie's sole disappointment was that Lisa de Kauffmann, daughter of the Ambassador from Denmark and Madame de Kauffmann, who had planned to go with her, was too ill to leave now. She hopes to join her later.

Julie was graduated from Madeira School in May. Her Uncle George, while in Washington for a visit of several months this past year, suggested this trip for his niece.

Next season, according to present plans, Julie will be one of the Capital's debutantes.

MRS. THOMAS HAYES of Woodacres went down to a department store this week to buy a skirt. "What type of skirt did you have in mind?" asked the clerk. Tiffy Hayes explained that she and her husband were leaving on a cruise to Cuba.

"Oh, I have just the thing for you," said the clerk, "here's what you want, but you'll need more than one, dearie. Mrs. Max Truitt—you know she's the daughter of Vice President Barkley—well, she came in here last week. She's going on a cruise, too. She bought this skirt in three different colors. I believe she's stopping off at Cuba, too."

Tiffy garnered all her sales resistance, bought only one skirt. And, she picked a different one from that chosen by Mrs. Truitt—just in case she ran into her in Cuba.

MRS. TOM CLARK, wife of our newest Supreme Court Justice, said a friend of hers casually remarked to the wife of a veteran Senator, "I certainly do feel sorry for Mrs. Barkley, having all those parties, this hectic life." The Senator's wife snapped back, "I don't feel one bit sorry for her. She has got a Vice President, and she hasn't had to go through even one campaign."

THE WILLIAM MORRELLS are back in Vienna Va., for a visit with Col. and Mrs. Lloyd McAdam. They lived in Vienna for a year, after coming to this country from Persia, where Bill, during the war, was editor of the newspaper published for British subjects in Teheran. He's now with the United Nations in New York, his particular branch being the Children's Fund of United Nations. They have a house in Westport, Conn., on the river.

Mary Morrell, in addition to running her home and taking care of two children, is taking dress designing. She wants to be a modiste. But, she has decided, if she is to be a successful modiste, she must sell her dresses with an accent. So—she is studying dress designing—and—French!

BILLY GIESE, age 3, who lives on Foxhall rd. got his Virginia aunt in trouble with his mother. Billy is not just a nephew, he is also a godchild. Auntie decided, when he visited her recently, that it was high time he had a little religion drummed into him. She tried to explain to him how the Lord lives in our hearts, is always ready to help us. Billy seemed so interested, so understanding. Auntie thought she was doin' all right. A couple of days later she had a call from her sister. The voice was stern. "Sis, what HAVE you been telling Billy? He had some tomato juice for lunch and he said, 'Mummy, did that tomato juice hit the Lord on the head, or just go on down pas' him?'"

STOPPING BRIEFLY in Washington last weekend were the W. P. T. Prestons, of New York and Bermuda. They were on their way to Middleburg to see their daughter, Betty, a student at Foxcroft. Doris and Bill Preston live in Bermuda eight months of the year.

Recently Doris won the top prizes on a radio quiz program there. She was enchanted with the prizes which she was able to carry home. Not a refrigerator or a venetian blind in the lot, but one jar of pickles, one bar of soap, and an ash tray.

The Prestons are now returning to their rambling house of coral, called Fairyland, near Hamilton, Bermuda.

To Fete Retiring Teacher

Mrs. George V. Frankhauser is giving a tea at her house today from 3 to 7 p. m., in honor of Miss Frances Elizabeth Hutchison, who is retiring after 42 years as a teacher at the Janney School.

Plan Tea Sunday

The Washington Circle, Daughters of Isabella, will entertain at a tea on Sunday, from 4 to 6 p m. at the home of Mrs. James F. Hartnett, 2813 Cathedral ave. nw.

Democratic Women Honored at Lunch

Honor guests at the weekly fashion show luncheon in the Mayflower Lounge Monday were Mrs. Oscar L. Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior; Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. O. Max Gardner, co-chairman of the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner committee; Mrs. William M. Boyle, wife of the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. India Edwards, executive director, women's division of the Democratic National Committee.

Miss Middleton, Mr. Thompson Wed

Miss Gloria Jean Middleton and Glenn Gerald Thompson were married February 4 at 4:30 p. m. in Christ's Episcopal Church, Charlottesville, Va. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Overman of Arlington, and her husband is the son of Mrs. John S. Irvine of Danville, Va.

The bride was costumed in a white wool suit and carried a bouquet of roses. Miss Aretta Webb was maid of honor, and Roy Thompson, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Diamonds and Decorations Sparkle at Achesons' Fete

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

WITH no official entertaining going on at the White House this year, members of the Diplomatic Corps have missed one of the season's most brilliant usual events—the annual diplomatic reception. Nearest thing to it was the reception last night given by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson in magnificent Anderson House to honor the Chiefs of Mission and their wives.

At 10 o'clock long black limousines began turning the curve in the driveway in steady procession. Something of the elegance of another era was revived by the brilliant setting in Anderson House. Decorations and bright ribbands gleamed on diplomatic white shirt fronts; lovely ladies swept by in trailing satins and brocades, with jewels sparkling from throats and wrists.

Secretary and Mrs. Acheson stood in the upstairs drawing room. Guests, after greeting their host, wandered through the tapestried gallery where a king's ransom in Gobelins is hung. They could look down from romantic little balconies to the scene below where the Marine Corps Orchestra played for dancing in the marble-pillared ballroom.

They could—and did—find a buffet table in the upstairs dining room where another fortune in tapestries covers the paneled walls, and another in the winter garden, a long glass-inclosed terrace which adjoins the ballroom.

The buffet was lavish and included cold ham, turkey, salads and champagne.

Guest List Includes Cream of Diplomacy

IN addition to Chiefs of Mission, the Achesons' guests also included the next ranking staff members (Ministers and, in some cases, Charges d'Affaires), members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, the Appropriations Committees of both houses of Congress, and Ambassadors to the Organization of American States.

The Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, dean of the Diplomatic Corps, and Madame Morgenstierne were hosts at dinner beforehand with Secretary and Mrs. Acheson as honor guests.

Madame Morgenstierne's gown was of ivory brocade, made with fitted bodice and flaring skirt. White gloves covered her arms and a strand of pearls was about her throat.

Mrs. Acheson wore a draped satin gown of chartreuse with long matching stole. Mrs. Stanley Woodward, wife of the chief of protocol, wore a gown of the same satin in a deeper shade.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was a guests at last night's colorful reception. With the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis was Henry F. Grady, our Ambassador to Greece. Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and her daughter, Margret, were two of the prettiest guests, the one in pale blue satin, the other in full-skirted brown tulle.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet—she wearing grey tulle—had with them Mme. Bonnet's niece, Mlle. Sophie Meyer.

The Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, was accompanied by Mme. Panyushkin, who kept her mink jacket on over her oyster white chiffon gown. The Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer were there, Senora de Berckemeyer in a beautiful gown of rose satin banded in black about the hem.

With the Yugoslavian Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic, was his sister, Mme. Mica Trbojevic, wearing purple orchids pinned to her white gown.

Capitol Hill Represented

EDWARD MILLER, Assistant Secretary of State, and Mrs. Miller were there, as were the Clark Cliffords, Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, the Leslie Biffles, Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran and Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally.

Senator and Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper was there, Mrs. Hickenlooper in a white net skirt with black velvet bodice and an apron front of delicate black Chantilly lace.

The Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens attended as did the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys, who wore his orange and blue striped ribband, and the Swedish Ambassador who had the Order of the North Star of his country pinned to a wide black ribband across his shirt front.

Mrs. Francis Perkins wore a splashy black and white print studded with rhinestones. Also shining with rhinestones was Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa in a white chiffon gown. Her husband, the Ambassador of Nicaragua, and the Norwegian Ambassador were toasting each other, reminiscing about the days when they sat side by side at U. N.

Undersecretary of State James E. Webb and Mrs. Webb were there, she in apricot satin. Mrs. George C. McGhee, accompanying her husband, Assistant Secretary of State McGhee, wore blue tulle over satin.

The most colorful guests were the Saudi Arabian Ambassador, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih, and the First Secretary, Sheikh Ahmed Abdul Jabbar, in their black robes and white and gold headdresses.

Camille Gutt, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, wore a medal suspended from a red ribband about his neck.

Mme. Abdul Rahim, wife of the Egyptian Ambassador, wore a white satin gown with a train. The Luxembourg Minister, Hugues Le Gallais, was accompanied by Mme. Le Gallais, who was in bouffant blue tulle.

Austrian Ambassador Kleinwaechter was accompanied by his two pretty daughters, Ebba and Gunda. The Indian Minister, B. R. Sen, who is going to Italy soon as Minister to that country, wore a black fitted coat with tight white trousers. Mrs. Sen was in a dull gold sari.

The Finnish Ambassador and Mme. Jutila, recently back from Mexico, were there, as were the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Koo, she in a bright blue satin tunic.

John M. Cabot, newly appointed Minister to Finland, was being greeted by old friends. Mrs. Cabot, who was with him, wore a white satin gown.

Also among the guests were Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, Bishop and Mrs. Angus Dun, Robert Woods Bliss and Assistant Chief of Protocol Ray Muir.

Many Parties Precede Diplomatic Reception

BEFORE the reception at Anderson House, a dinner was given by the Greek Ambasador and Mme. Dendramis, honoring the United States Ambassador to Greece, Henry F. Grady, who is here on a short visit. Another diplomatic dinner was given by the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Wrong, who entertained for 20.

The Charge d'Affaires of India, B. R. Sen, and Mrs. Sen attended last evening's diplomatic reception, and they were honored beforehand at a dinner given by the First Secretary of the Indian Embassy and Mrs. Kaul. Among the dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sparks, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Mathews and the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Signora Ortona.

The Charge and his wife were hosts themselves at a party earlier in the day, when they entertained at cocktails for embassy staff members and their wives. At the end of the month, the Sens are leaving for Rome, Italy, where Mr. Sen will serve as Ambassador of India.

Busy Day, Too, For Egypt's Envoy

IT was a busy day too for the Egyptian Ambassador and Mme. Abdul Rahim, who gave a cocktail party at the embassy and also attended the reception at Anderson House. The Ambassador and his wife are leaving town Friday for a short visit to Egypt, and at cocktails they said goodbye to some 150 friends.

In the gathering were associate Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton, Miss Kitling Lo, who is currently showing her Chinese paintings at the Arts Club, shared honors last evening with Archbishop Paul Yu-pin at a dinner given by Miss Genevieve Wimsatt at her Georgetown house.

Hugo Gouthier, popular Counselor at the Brazilian Embassy, is leaving Washington soon, and a farewell party for him was given yesterday by Randolph Rouse at his house from 6 to 8 p. m.

More Parties Honor Departing Couples

IT'S still a party a day for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Chapman and Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert B. Carney. Both couples are leaving Washington soon, the Chapmans for home and Australia, and the Carneys for a vacation in Florida before going to a new home in Norfolk, Va.

General and Mrs. Chapman were honor guests yesterday at a cocktail party given by Lieut. Col. and Mrs. L. W. Cumpston, and the Carneys were entertained at a dinner given in their honor by Vice Admiral and Mrs. John Dale Price.

When Mighty Hunter Returns Lugging Rabbits, Spicy Hasenpfeffer Will Solve Menu Quandary for the Family Chef

DEAR ANNE:

One of my youngsters loves to go rabbit hunting, so our supply of this type of wild game is pretty constant. It hurts his feelings when his quarry isn't eaten but I know few interesting ways to prepare the meat. Have you any suggestions?

J. P. K.

Have you ever tried hasenpfeffer? This is an interesting dish. The following recipe came from the "Fish and Game Cookbook," by Harry T. Botsford (Cornell Maritime Press).

HASENPFEFFER

1 large fat rabbit (wild or domestic)
1 pint water
1 teaspoon salt
4 cloves
5 tablespoons butter
1 pint cider vinegar
3 sliced onions
1 teaspoon pepper
Pinch each bay leaves and tarragon
1 cup thick sour cream

Let jointed rabbit stand for at least 24 hours in vinegar and seasonings to marinate. Dry and brown in butter, adding a little of the marinade from time to time.

When tender, remove rabbit, add cream to skillet and stir until gravy is smooth. Add additional seasonings if your taste desires them and serve the sauce with the hasenpfeffer. (The name means "pickled rabbit.")

Still another recipe that the youngsters might like is the following:

RABBIT CHILI CON CARNE

2 pounds boneless meat, chopped
6 tablespoons butter
1 minced clove garlic

Brown meat in butter and garlic, then add a sauce composed of the following:

1 cup hot water
1 can Italian tomato paste
2 medium cans tomatoes
1 minced green pepper
Salt and pepper

Cook meat in this mixture at low heat for 1½ hours. Add 3 cans of kidney beans, ½ teaspoon red pepper, and 2 teaspoons chili powder and simmer for 30 minutes.

Regarding a recent letter in your column about where to find a hair bleach that comes in powder form, there is such a product, usable both as a laundry and hair bleach. It is a white powder which comes in little clear plastic envelopes. Completely harmless, it produces active hydrogen peroxide, so essential in bleaching the hair. It is now sold in a good many self-service laundries and will be available soon in grocery stores throughout the Eastern Seaboard. D. L. K.

DEAR ANNE:

I received a pair of white figurines from Greece and in the process of shipping, the head of one was cracked off. Can you tell me where it may be possible to have this repaired? H. F. P.

One local firm that does expert repair work on objects of art can be reached by telephoning Adams 5795.

DEAR ANNE:

You have had several comments in your column about the relative merits of mahogany, walnut and maple furniture. I haven't noticed any reference to cherry furniture. How does this wood compare with others in durability of finish and hardness? Would a cherry piece take hard knocks as well as rock maple, oak, and birch? L. C.

Many pieces of antique furniture that are still beautiful today are made of cherry. This seems a good testimonial to its ability to take hard knocks. It is hard, close-grained wood, comparable in its toughness and durability to the other woods you mentioned. In color, it is reddish brown to a light yellowish brown. Though widely used in Early American furniture, it is comparatively scarce today.

DEAR ANNE:

Would you give me the names and addresses where I might go to buy shoes which are not mates? Since my feet are different sizes, I have always had to buy two pairs in order to get one pair. M. M. D.

Can any reader help M. M. D. with information on this subject?

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit telephone or direct mail replies. Address all letters to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses will be used unless a request is made to the contrary.

Women Delegates Will Pour Into District This Weekend

By Genevieve Reynolds

SEVERAL hundred women visitors will pour into the Nation's Capital this weekend. Drawing cards are two conferences.

From Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland will come delegates to the District 12 Midatlantic Council Conference of the Credit Women's Breakfast Clubs. The meeting opens Sunday at the Statler Hotel.

Virginia members of Epsilon Province of Sigma Phi Gamma International Sorority will join with the Washington group for a two-day conclave. The fifteenth annual meeting, Saturday and Sunday in the Shoreham Hotel, will feature the 150th anniversary of the founding of the City of Washington. Highlight of the gathering will be a Sesquicentennial Ball Saturday night, preceded by election of province officers earlier in the day.

The Credit Women's Breakfast Club of the Nation's Capital will be hostess to Breakfast Club groups from nearby States. A coffee hour is scheduled for Sunday. Mrs. Lillian R. Levin, president of the District club, will be official hostess during the convention, which will close with a banquet and dance on Valentine's Day.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wanting Good Companionship, Widow Married Twice-Divorced Man 10 Years Ago, and Finds Herself Disappointed in His Pace and Temper

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was extremely happy in my first marriage, then was a widow for many years, rearing my child alone. I married again 10 years ago, hoping to have a happy companionship, but I find myself paired with a man who doesn't care for any social life—and his temper is terrific.

We get along very well provided we do as he likes, but if he is crossed in the least he screams. I am sure all the neighbors know our business. I had many women friends in other years, but I never see anyone any more. Henry doesn't like people generally, either socially or in business, and he claims this is due to his having had so few friends, etc.

Henry is twice divorced, doesn't get along or bother with his own relatives, and when I married him he drank quite a bit and hadn't any savings. Gradually I got him to overcome the heavy drinking, and I am sure my continual pleas to "go easy" keep him moderate in this respect. Also I have taken a job to help with expenses, which allows us to save money and have a car and some of the nice things we couldn't afford on his salary alone (which is the same as mine).

He Isn't Stingy, But Shuns Activity

WE NEVER have guests in and he never wants to go out, and if I suggest any diversion it starts a scene. He wants to know if I will ever settle down. He goes to bed every night after dinner, so our days are a routine of rising, eating, working and retiring; and when I ask him "What kind of a life is this?" he retorts "It is the best I can do; and if you don't like it and feel you can better yourself, go ahead; no one is stopping you."

He gives me his paycheck, he isn't stingy about that, and I run a neat home and save all I can—and he admits that he has more now than he's ever had. But why we have a car I don't know. It is in the garage except for a few hours a week, and then he complains it's no pleasure, too much traffic.

I was a person who got along nicely with people, but I find myself becoming extremely critical, too. I had wanted a home and companionship so badly, and now I feel that maybe I've made a terrible mistake. The situation is getting me down. If I am at fault please tell me, because I am truly at a crossroad. We don't live; we only exist! According to things he tells me, Henry has had one lifelong grief after another. Could this be the cause of our troubles? Please advise me. C. R.

On the Subject of Frustrations

DEAR C. R.: Entering an elevator yesterday I encountered an outspoken gentleman of the press, honest and intense, and to my casual greeting "How've you been?" he replied with droll earnestness, "I've been adjusting to my frustrations, and believe me that is the beginning of wisdom." True indeed, and when you reach that plane of understanding and accommodation, the quality of your living should improve vastly.

In blind disregard of all sorts of evidence that Henry was a problem character—twice divorced, a heavy drinker spending every cent, disagreeably indifferent to his closest relatives, etc.—you married him 10 years ago, at the behest of overpowering need to find some easement of your problem of social isolation.

At that time you thought it sufficient for your purposes that he was available and willing to team up with you; but having got him under contract, you began feeling (with unreasoning dependency) that he ought to justify your "interest" in him by becoming the "perfect everything" in your newly ambitious scheme of life. And since then, insofar as his ways of doing haven't complied with your personal theories of how he should behave to gratify you, to that extent you've held him guilty of being more adversary than helpmeet.

Wife Wants to Run Away From Boredom

THAT'S HOW I see the background of your quarrel with Henry; and it seems to me that in your own way you are just as selfish as you accuse him of being. You don't rejoice in the substantial accommodations he has made, in settling down to a sober thrifty pace to oblige your demands for security; and neither do you try really to assuage your gregarious inclinations without fighting his hermit tendencies.

Unfortunately Henry feels defiantly inferior to other folks in purely social situations; and that's why he avoids "company" as such, also why he drank heavily when "on his own" in other years. Apparently he has gone through life with fears concentrated on wounds and shocks experienced in early years—always fighting the past instead of accepting the present as a brand-new potential. Under your wing he feels a certain security that helps keep him sober, and I think it's entirely true (as he says) that he is doing the best he can to please you. Ingrained neurotic distortions prevent his doing any more.

You are bored with each other; and to escape that you want to run around with Henry at your heels, and since he won't oblige in that respect, you react like a social cripple, as if you were helpless to negotiate neighborly types of recreation without his close physical support. And that's just sulking, registering protest in signs of "injury," instead of acting rationally to be as happy as possible in an imperfect relationship—that you grabbed at to start, because you felt that, even at worst, it would be better than none. Guide to Glamour

Eat Yourself Right Into a Gorgeous Figure

Here is advice on glamour from an expert—Terry Hunt, a conditioner of Hollywood stars. Among his clients are Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Shirley Temple.

This is the fourth of six articles.

By Terry Hunt

MY FOUR-DAY diet is a corrective eating program on which the average person loses four pounds.

The meals should be taken at the same time each day, if possible. Use very little salt. Do not use a salt substitute. Use no pepper, catsup, Worcestershire sauce, or anything of similar nature. Eat salads without dressing.

Do not rearrange food combinations or substitute one food for another. No sugar or cream is allowed.

Before you start the diet, consult your doctor and abide by his advice.

The development of charm and personality depends largely upon correct eating. Diet is one of the principal ingredients in the secret process of evolving a truly attractive woman.

A Gorgeous Figure Essential to Beauty

EVERYONE admits a gorgeous figure is essential to a beautiful woman. The right proportions of bone, muscle and fat will give her such a figure, but endow her with too much or too little of any of these and her appearance falls short of the ideal.

Bone structures cannot be altered, but the proper food definitely can assist in shaping the body to alluring proportions.

Then there's a woman's skin — it must be soft, flawless and of fine texture. An exquisite skin enhances a woman's teeth, hair, and eyes, and affects her entire appearance.

An improper diet can make your eyes dull, your lips pale, your nose pimpled — it can effectively kill any trace of beauty you may possess.

A perfectly balanced diet can make your eyes sparkle with health, your skin soft and beautiful, your complexion rose-tinted and lovely. Since these are essentials to beauty, we must study our eating habits carefully, in order that we may understand just what goes to make up a correct diet.

People nowadays fall into one of these broad classifications — those who are too heavy and wish to reduce and, those who are too slender and wish to add weight, and those who are just right and wish only to maintain their well-proportioned bodies.

Sane Eating Progrem For Normal Weight

FIRST, I should like to set down good, sane eating programs for the two former classifications — programs which have been tried and proved. These can be advantageously followed and, combined with the proper weight-reducing and weight-gaining exercises, will help bring a person to normal poundage. They will also help to maintain it.

In the event you do not care to follow a reducing program, but would like to take off weight, remember which foods are healthful but nonfattening: such as chicken, boiled beef, grilled lean steak; fish, either broiled or boiled; vegetables (boiled plain), any raw salad with no dressing, all kinds of stewed fruits or compotes, fresh fruits and dry toast.

If you want to take off weight, do so by a combination of corrective eating and exercising. In this fashion the excess poundage can be taken off safely.

Don't Take It Off Too Fast

A WORD to warn you now about the fast reducing of weight—don't do it.

Be content to take off a few pounds at a time. Don't try to get rid of all your excess fat in one harrowing, strenuous reducing treatment.

Remember that when you grow fat, some of the excess is padded around your cheeks and the curve of your jaw, under your eyes, about your temples, as well as the rest of your body.

When drastic reducing methods suddenly melt this fat away, without giving the skin a chance to adjust itself, you're bound to have wrinkles and loose skin

Remember that your skin will eventually adjust itself to your changing body size, but it does so slowly.

Sign of age in a woman is a wrinkled, flabby skin. Avoid this by reducing in gradual and sensible tempo.

Something else to remember in taking off weight: Don't go to extremes.

Don't get so sylphlike that you have no energy and vitality left for the day's work. Don't starve yourself to the point where you completely lose your appetite and all desire for good food. In this direction lies serious illness.

If you are overthin, you will be easy prey to both fatigue and disease. Try hard to strike a happy medium and to keep to the middle of the road when it comes to reducing.

New Sewing Club For Mothers With Small Children

By Jean Belaire

Sewing club groups have been planned to fill the needs of young mothers with small children of school or pre-school age and a minimum amount of free time in which to plan and make wardrobes for themselves and the children. These mothers are taught how to make clothing out of anything from father's out-worn tuxedo to flour sacks. Big sister's last year's dress becomes baby's first play suit. This class meets the need for every conceivable type of sewing for the home, from draperies to dungarees. The members of this group who wish to bring along children of pre-school age are extended the privilege of using one of the classrooms as a nursery during this morning period, with the provision that each group will independently arrange to employ one supervisor for every ten children. The school is equipped with a complete electric kitchen and is air-conditioned. Children can be taken to a park within a block of the school in fair weather. If this is your idea of heaven, you'll find it at The Belaire School of Practical Dress Design, at 821 19th St. N.W. STerling 9040.

Box Jacket Suits— A Youthful Fashion

Another suit fashion that I like is the box jacket suit. It looks young, yet at the same time, is easy to fit and easy to wear. Besides it's one of the most useful suits a woman can have because the box jacket can double as a little short coat to be worn over dresses or separates.

This spring there are particularly interesting new fashion features in the box jacket suits. The jackets are shorter—22 to 24 inches, and straight in cut—some even with neat little vents at the sides. Shoulders may be smooth and round, with straight loose sleeves set into a wide dropped armhole. And skirts are either pleated all around or as slim as a reed.

Blandy Heads Unit to Better Health Services

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Formation of the Health Information Foundation, which will seek improvement of the Nation's health facilities through development and dissemination of factual information, was announced today.

Admiral William H. P. Blandy, USN (ret.), who resigned last week as commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, has been named president of the foundation. John G. Searle, president of G. D. Searle & Co., Chicago, is chairman of the board.

Financed by members of the pharmaceutical, drug and allied industries, the foundation will seek to "encourage the mass distribution of all health facilities" by finding out where they are needed and how they can be distributed efficiently, Searle said.

He said the foundation would deal only in facts and that its charter prohibited it from "engaging in lobbying or in propaganda activities."

Addressing a luncheon meeting, Blandy outlined specific projects to be undertaken by the foundation and said one of its first operations would be "an inventory of available factual data on the Nation's health facilities," especially in relation to population.

Stockholders Of Bethlehem Adopt Pension

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 7 (AP).—Bethlehem Steel Corp. stockholders today overwhelmingly approved the company's proposed $100-a-month pension for employes eligible for retirement.

At the same time, the stockholders turned down a resolution proposed by a stockholder to limit pensions of company executives to $25,000 a year.

Eugene G. Grace, chairman of the board, announced that the vote represented 66.6 percent of the company's entire outstanding stock in favor of the $100 pensions, and 2.6 percent against. The remainder of the shares was not represented in the vote.

It was Bethlehem's $100-a-month pension plan to employes 65 years old or over which set the pattern for settlement of the Nation-wide month-long strike of CIO United Steelworkers last November 1.

Oleo Pats' Shape Delays Conferees On Tax Repeal Bill

An argument over the shape of the product yesterday held up a bill to repeal special Federal taxes on oleomargarine. Senate-House conferees deadlocked on a dairy-State demand that oleo be sold only in triangular shapes so it won't look like butter.

They then adjourned for about 10 days because some conferees had other commitments.

Both Houses of Congress have voted to repeal the 10-cents-a-pound tax on colored oleo, a one-fourth-cent a pound levy on the uncolored product and special license fees for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

In a two-hour meeting today the conferees tentatively approved: a requirement for inspection of both oleo and butter

By Georganne Williamson

THE Casino Royal this week is featuring an "International Dance Team" in their first appearance in the States. The team, Lalo and Musette, are originally from Australia. However, they've played in many countries, having appeared in Bombay, Singapore, London, Paris, etc. America is their favorite, they say, and they're becoming American citizens as soon as possible.

Patti Forrest, contortionist acrobat, has a wide variety of control-acts. One act, on her hands, from a pair of illuminated stairs, is especially popular. She lists her previous appearances with Tommy Dorsey's group and Johnny Rothwell.

Jerry Morgan and his harmonica and Lana Del Rio complete the show. Lana is strictly Latin, with colorful Spanish costumes.

HARMONICA virtuoso Stan Fisher is taking over the place of Artini and Consuelo in the Mayflower Lounge floor show. He has appeared with Milton Berle many times, and was recently at the Capitol Theater here. It's the first time harmonica playing has been featured in the Lounge, and should be right in line with John Durant's showtime performance. Durant, bass fiddler with Henry Brandon's orchestra and a youthful likeness of Danny Kaye, elaborates with whistles, and clicking and smacking of lips, which make up his special act.

A WASHINGTON pianist, Ethel Gunderson, is playing in the Neptune Room now. She has appeared there before, as well as the Annapolis Hotel Anchor Room and the Rainbow Room in the Hamilton Hotel.

With her is the Billy Arnold trio. Arnold plays the violin and sax, accompanied by the organ and drums; he played in the Neptune Room several years ago.

Tax Lien Filed On Bethesda Woman

A tax lien notice was filed in District Court yesterday against Mrs. Helen McGarvey Saul, 5636 Audubon rd., Bethesda, Md., charging that she owed $42,904.03 in back income taxes. The notice charged that the money represented income taxes due from the years 1937 through 1943.

The wife of Bernard F. Saul, contractor, Mrs. Saul could not be reached for comment. Her address was listed as 610 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., on the tax lien notice, but residents at that address reported yesterday no woman by that name lived there.

'Berlin Command'

July 7, 1945: The Date the Fate of Berlin Was Sealed

By Brig. Gen. Frank Howley

This is the fourth of 12 articles taken from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, from 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

IT was still the first week in July when General Clay, acting for General Eisenhower, Robert Murphy, Eisenhower's political adviser, and others flew into Berlin for a high-level conference with the Russians, the first real business meeting of Allied military governors.

By this time, the French had obtained a sector. They were awarded the boroughs of Reinickendorff and Wedding, sliced out of the British sector, as their share of the city, but were excluded from the conference for fear of offending the Russians, who had neglected to invite them to attend.

If the fate of Berlin was in doubt, it was sealed at that meeting on July 7, 1945.

General Parks had me prepare a general plan for the basis of an Allied Kommandatura, proposed by the Russians, outlining the conditions under which we felt Berlin should be governed by the four powers.

It is needless to dwell upon the ill-fated plan now, except to say it anticipated correctly what finally happened to the city.

We had based our calculations on the supposition that there would be questions on which we never would be able to agree with the Russians.

The plan also listed demands we would make upon the Russians. In the event of irreconcilable differences, we proposed that each individual commandant should handle the situation in his own way in his own sector. We definitely were opposed to letting the Russians hamstring us with the veto.

Rebuke From Clay

AS a colonel, I was wandering aimlessly around headquarters, waiting for the generals to break up their meeting, when I was summoned to the conference room.

The discussion revolved around the plan I had submitted. General Clay was letting General Parks know, in fairly blunt terms, that he didn't like it and had no idea we proposed handling the city on a divided basis.

Clay insisted all questions arising in Berlin must be settled unanimously by all the powers.

Being a humble colonel among the highest brass, I timidly put in, "If I may say something, General Parks——" but nobody even heard me. I then put my head in the lion's mouth by making a strong protest.

"I know the plan very well, having worked on it in accordance with general instructions," I said, taking the initiative boldly. "General Parks has no idea of setting up a little empire in the American sector. After all, we don't know the Communists; we didn't even have diplomatic relations with them until 1932. There are going to be many questions that can't be solved on a unanimous basis. They might be questions of religion, or education. The British, French and Americans may agree on a million things; there will be many on which the Russians won't agree."

Clay glared at me. I felt like a brash, uninformed junior in that Olympian company of omniscient generals.

"You are entirely wrong," he said coldly. "I have just come from Washington, and it certainly is the intention of our Government to administer Berlin on a unanimous basis."

'Orders From Washington'

HE SAID much more, but I suddenly realize I had become his whipping boy.

Had I not realized that Clay, a great soldier, was obeying orders from Washington and describing our policies to me for the benefit of the others, I would have been angry. So I shut up.

As the meeting wore on, the sinking feeling in my stomach got worse and worse after it dawned on me that, while Clay and the others opposed Parks' and my plan, they had no alternate plan of their own.

They were bound for the most momentous conference yet held regarding Berlin and they thought it was to meet the Russians socially.

So much time was consumed by this preliminary meeting that we had to tear like mad across the city to get to Russian headquarters. When we arrived, a few minutes late, Zhukov, Sokolovsky and the others were waiting.

Zhukov was at the head of the table and "Wise Guy" Sokolovsky was on his left. Behind them stood a group of Russian experts on everything from coal to food and transportation.

The Americans sat on the right side of the table and the British on the left. Neither of the two delegations had brought along any experts.

Delegation Stunned

ZHUKOV called the meeting to order immediately. "Well, gentlemen," he said, "shall we start business?"

The two delegations seemed a little stunned. If they thought it was going to be a social call, that fantasy went out the window immediately.

It was obvious both were unprepared. We had no plan. Neither had the British, who had taken over their sector much later than we had. And the first business of the day was the creation of a Kommandatura.

The British and American representatives were even more stunned when Zhukov whipped out a one-page statement describing how the Kommandatura would be set up, naturally providing for the veto: "The resolutions . . . are to be passed unanimously."

Parks turned to me. Frank," he said, "take the interpreters and check this, will you?"

With the interpreters, I started out to an anteroom, when the Russians suddenly noticed I was a full colonel.

Their officer was also a colonel, but rank-consciousness took charge. The colonel was pulled back and replaced by a one-star general. It was a typical Russian move: they refused to be outranked.

Legally It Stinks

BACK in the conference room, I handed my copy to General Clay, who half-turned and asked, "Is it okay?"

"Well," I said, "as a legal document it stinks, but as a rough note on what you've been talking about, it's all right."

Clay took his pen out and wrote his name across the bottom of the page, thereby indicating he had no intention of quibbling about commas, periods, or—anything else.

We were going to get along with the Russians and we were quite willing to start off on their terms.

I think it was a good indication of the policy we were to follow in Berlin for many months, doing almost anything to win over the Russians, allay their suspicions, and convince them we were their friends.

Even Henry Wallace couldn't have asked for more appeasement.

Video Making Stay-at-Homes Of Set-Owners, Survey Shows

Washington television set owners are real stay-at-homes.

For them is not the best seller, the movie, classic or the sports spectacle; their eyes are glued to the video screen.

These are the findings of Charles Alldredge, head of a Washington public relations firm, based on a survey of 400 set owners here.

He described the effect of the new medium on the lives of Washington's television families:

Movies—Adults who attended theaters an average of 4.51 times a month before buying television, now go 1.27 times—a reduction of 72 percent. Children who went 5.13 times before television, now go 2.75 times—a drop of 46 percent.

Reading—Adults reported they read magazines 22.6 percent less, books 29.1 percent less and newspapers 4.7 percent less.

"While newspaper reading has been affected in a relatively minor degree, there has been a frequent shift in the hours in which newspapers are read, i. e., earlier or later than formerly," Alldredge noted.

"Although this appears to apply principally to afternoon newspapers, it also applies to that portion of morning papers read customarily in the evening. Less than one percent of those interviewed volunteered that they had discontinued subscriptions to afternoon papers," he said.

Radio—Daytime listening time dropped from an average of 3 hours 36 minutes to 2 hours 54 minutes; nighttime listening from 3 hours 42 minutes to 24 minutes.

Sports—Reduction in attendance at football was 40 percent; at baseball games, 36.7 percent and at wrestling and boxing, 44.7 percent.

Jennie Tourel Scores Triumph With Varied Vocal Program

By Paul Hume

Jennie Tourel's first public concert in Washington became an overwhelming personal triumph.

Singing in Constitution Hall last night, the greatest singing musician-artist we know placed before her audience a wondrous array of music.

Outstanding among these was the cycle of four songs by Modeste Moussorgsky, the Songs and Dances of Death. Given in the Russian of the singer's birth, these songs established an emotional mood of tremendous impact.

They are concerned with the coming of death to four individuals or groups: to a drunkard, to a mother with her sick child, to a young girl in love, and to an army about to enter battle.

The cycle was written after Boris Godounoff. Its demands upon an interpreter are constant and varied. To all of them Tourel was an easy equal. The colors laid upon her voice were at once soft and sinister. Her rhythmic command was immense. The texts sounded so superb that one could not be disturbed that they were in a tongue known to few listeners.

Earlier, in classic songs and a group of Schubert, Tourel exhibited the vocal control which is her supreme gift. Every phase seemed spontaneous yet was the polished result of endless practice. Rapid coloratura lines, as in Rosina's aria from the Barber of Seville, were immaculate.

After the Russian set, when Tourel sang four French songs, her art took on other facets of perfection. We shall not hear the greatness of her singing of Liszt's "Oh, quand je dors" until she comes again to sing it for us.

Five encores included the Habanera from Carmen, and songs by Nin, Hahn, Poulenc, and Sir Landon Ronald. George Reeves played well though a bit quietly and at times with little dramatic feeling. We hope to hear Tourel frequently in the future.

Today's Children

The children of today are worth . . . Their weight in joy and sorrow . . . Because they are the parents and . . . The leaders of tomorrow . . . They are the little boys and girls . . . Who look with eager faces . . . For every opportunity . . . To fill their future places . . . They turn to us for guidance in . . . The knowledge of creation . . . That they may serve the neighborhood . . . And build a better Nation . . . So let us teach them all we can . . . And help them grow together . . . In wisdom and in fortitude . . . Beyond whatever weather . . . And let us give them comfort and . . . The nourishment to flower . . . That they may stand successfully . . . In their important hour.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

Army-Navy Maneuvers End in Draw

Members of the Army and Navy Club found themselves in a lively controversy last week. The issue was the installation of a television receiver in the reading room.

Six members of long standing presented a petition that the machine be removed because it disturbed the peace and calm of the reading room.

But the video fans—most of them determined to continue watching their favorite boxing and wrestling programs—countered with some well planned strategy.

They conducted a secret survey of the reading habits of the six petitioners.

On four consecutive nights, they found all six with newspapers in their laps or over their faces—sound asleep in their chairs.

At latest reports, the television set was still in the reading room.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Harry Phillips of 2222 I st. nw. was passing the corner of 14th and Pennsylvania ave. nw. when he saw a taxi driver, pedestrian and policeman engaged in earnest discussion.

Curious as to the subject of the debate, Harry kept his ears open as he passed, and heard the cop say:

"Well, what did you expect him to do when you blew your horn—take off and fly?"

FM REVISITED

Shortly after my items about FM radio, I got a long-distance call from Prof. Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor of FM.

"I get The Washington Post up here in New York," he said "and I'm distressed to find that you encounter interference on the FM band. Do you have a good set?"

An embarrassing question, that. I have a standard make (with "Armstrong system FM") that sold for just under $400 when I bought it some three years ago.

"Well," I hedged, "at the time I bought it, it was considered one of the better sets. But I'm not complaining about the set—I just think the stations are too close together."

"Maybe they are," said the professor, "but with a good, modern set you should get sharp tuning anyhow. I've asked the factory to send you a test set, to prove to you that FM has many advantages."

I tried to explain that I wasn't questioning FM's many advantages, but rather the crowding of several stations into one small segment of my dial. But he insisted that I test a modern set, and the next day it arrived.

It is the same make as my big set at home. But this one is a table model FM-only job, and retails for around $40.

I found that it has very great selectivity, even surrounded by the electrical interference one finds in a downtown office. It picks up distant stations that don't even blink the magic eye on my big set, and the tuning is sharp and distinct.

But the stations are still lined up like soldiers, one right after the other. And it's not very difficult for an all-thumbs guy like me to tune in the wrong one.

However, they come in nice and clear, so I have no complaints. Except for one thing.

Now that I'm convinced that modern receivers are better than the one I bought three years ago, I can't figure out how the factory managed to pack the sample set in its protective jigsaw of cardboard and get it inside the carton.

If Professor Armstrong will lend me an engineer for a few minutes to help with the packing, I'll send his set back.

SUGGESTION BOX

C. Warren Loveless of 4416 Harrison st. nw. calls attention to a traffic situation of interest. He says:

"Ever since the new South Capitol st. bridge has been open, there has been need for either traffic lights or additional stop signs at the intersection of South Capitol and Virginia ave.

"The center support of the adjacent railroad bridge there makes a blind spot which is very dangerous to motorists and pedestrians alike."

Having just narrowly escaped a collision at that spot with a left-turner who didn't see me soon enough, I'm inclined to agree.

Spies More Active, Hoover Says

By Drew Pearson

After J. Edgar Hoover's lengthy session with the Senate's Appropriations Committee last week regarding A-bomb leaks, newspapers reported tha Senators left ashen-faced over the disclosures.

J. Edgar Hoover

Here is what Hoover said to cause those ashen faces.

Hoover dramatically reported that subversive activities in the United States are at an all-time high—worse than during the war.

He also revealed that Communists are doing away with party cards in order to prevent detection and conviction. Instead, they identify each other by word of mouth.

Hoover told the Senators that Communists were making a special attempt to infiltrate into strategic industries such as telegraph, telephone and the manufacture of electrical equipment. Asked pointblank by the Senators whether there still was a spy ring inside the Government, Hoover answered "no."

The head G-man complained that Elizabeth Bentley's sensational disclosures two years ago had been premature and that as a result the FBI lost many sources that had been carefully planted for 10 years inside the Communist Party.

Listening to Hoover as he testified was Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan, who was partly responsible for the Bentley disclosures. Ferguson, together with Congressman P. Parnell Thomas, then chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee, heard about Miss Bentley in connection with the Communist treason trial being prepared in New York and jumped the gun on the Justice Department. In order to cop the news headlines, they called Miss Bentley before their committees and smeared her testimony all over the front pages.

Hoover was testifying in order to secure appropriations for about 700 new employes. He illustrated the work of his G-men by telling how, during the first trial of Alger Hiss, the FBI was unable to locate Hiss' maid. All Mrs. Chambers could remember about the maid was her name, "Mary." However, after the first trial, Mrs. Chambers dug up a rough sketch she had made of the maid, gave it to the FBI, and after honeycombing and using only this sketchy evidence, finally the G-men located the maid.

Hoover told the Senators that Dr. Klaus Fuchs had access to every atomic secret in the United States and was even in on the "final critical assembly" of the A-bomb. This was the most top-secret phase of the Manhattan Project.

Here is the background in which Dr. Klaus Fuchs, arrested as a Russian spy in London, worked in the United States during the war.

Los Alamos, where he was stationed, was unlike all the other atomic installations and not compartmentalized. In other words, scientists did not work in secret compartments, but were familiar with each other's work. There were some 600 scientists at Los Alamos, of which the foreign "colony" numbered about 60—20 British, two Swiss, 10 German refugees, and some Italians.

Fuchs' friends recall that he first worked on atomic matters in Canada, at the Chalk River plant in northern Ontario. This is Canada's chief atomic lab. Next he went to New York, where he was assigned to working out the plans for the Oak Ridge diffusion plant; then on to Los Alamos.

The scientists at Los Alamos were confined to a 20-mile radius from the Los Alamos lab, due to the fact that an Army officer made a security slip in a Denver bar in the early days and trips to Denver were ruled out. Scientists were also forbidden to communicate with either friends or relatives—except in emergency.

According to British Intelligence, Klaus Fuchs came to Britain from Germany in 1932 as an anti-Nazi refugee on orders from Moscow. Fuchs' instructions were to work his way into British scientific circles. As a result he became a British citizen, knew every secret of the A-bomb including the exact size to the critical mass that makes an explosive, and even the secret of the detonator.

Fuchs also knew about the H-bomb, which our scientists tried to produce before they got the A-bomb. The British believe he gave everything to the Russians.
